SPRINGTOWN MAN HANGS HIMSELF

Alva Minard, Worried Over Failing Eyesight, Takes Life by Hanging Tuesday—Body Found Later.

Alvah Minard, 32 years old, of Springtown, committed suicide by hanging himself in Jesse Deyo's barn at that place Tuesday afternoon. Worry over failing eyesight is thought to be the cause of Minard taking his life.

The young man had been employed by Mr. Deyo since last April. Lately he seemed to be brooding over his health, particularly his failing eyesight, and had at times appeared to be suffering from a temporary aberration of the mind. Tuesday Mr. Deyo went to New Paltz to attend a meeting of the dairymen, leaving Minard on the farm.

Henry Rosencrans, also employed on the farm, missed Minard that afternoon, instituted a search and found the body hanging from a beam in the hay mow.

Minard was a son of the late H. W. Minard and Mrs. Minard, the latter residing with her son, Perry Minard, at Springtown. He is also survived by his wife, who was Miss Dora Freer, of Rosendale. Ira D. Minard, principal of South Street School, Newburgh, is a brother. Two sisters, Mrs. Burger and Mrs. A. H. Deyo of New York city, also survive.

SUBURBAN NEWS.

Whitepori.

The Valley Grange has a large number of trophies won by them at various contests.

BRADY PRESIDENT OF C. E. UNION

Officers Elected at the Annual Rally of the Kingston Local Union of Christian Endeavor Tuesday Evening.

The first rally of the new year and the annual session of the Kingston Local Union of Christian Endeavor was held Tuesday evening in the Church of the Comforter, when William W. Brady, Jr., of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, was re-elected president. The other officers elected were: Vice president, Prof. Raymond H. Van Valkenburgh, of the Ponckhockie Church; recording secretary, Miss Belle Costello, of the First Reformed Church; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. C. Longyear, of the Wurts Street Baptist Church; treasurer, Miss Hazel Dutton, of the Fair Street Reformed Church; spiritual advisor, the Rev. W. F. Stowe, of the Church of the Comforter.

The rally was one of the most successful held by the union and was attended by over 150 delegates and friends of the union. The church had been artistically decorated with the national colors and Christian Endeavor emblem. The new color scheme of the C. E. emblem, made up in red, white and blue, was strikingly beautiful, and the credit for the design is largely due to the work of C. A. Raschke, a former treasurer of the union.

The theme of the rally was "Service," and the addresses andsongs were along that line of thought. The singing was exceptionally fine and was under the direction of Pastor Stowe.

The session opened with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Appledoorn, pastor of the Port Ewen Reformed Church, and was followed by the Scripture lesson read by the Rev. G. B. Mead, pastor of the Connelly Reformed Church.

At the business session the annual reports were filed and election of officers followed.

The Local Union Banner was awarded to the society having the largest representation present at the rally and was won by the society of the Ponckhockie Church with 26 delegates present. The Church of the Comforter was second with 25 delegates, and the Wurts Street Baptist Society third with 18 delegates.

An interesting address was delivered during the evening by Mrs. F. P. Smith, a member of the Wurts Street Baptist Society, her topic being "A Silver Lining."

George Hudler, of the Church of the Comforter, sang as an offertory, "Somebody," which he rendered effectively.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. F. W. Moot, pastor of the Ponckhockie Church. His topic was "You and I in Service." Pastor Moot gave a very interesting address and held the close attention of his audience.

THAT B. M. C. RECEPTION.

New Quarters to be Formally Opened Friday Evening.

A big event of the Y. M. C. A. social season takes place Friday evening when the Business Men's Club, which by its rapid increase in the number of members, has outgrown its former quarters, will open its new rooms at a rousing social meeting. These meetings made a reputation last winter which has caused the members of the Business Men's Club to look anxiously for the first of the semi-monthly meetings to be held this year.

Among the attractions are refreshments, pocket billiards, chess, checkers, dominoes and other games.

The big thing, however, is that the members—and each member is entitled to bring a guest—are going to get together for a thoroughly goood time.

Chairman S. M. Watts, of a special committee which has the meeting in charge, says he will not be satisfied unless all former attendance records are so thoroughly shattered that they will look very small in comparison.

Invited To Hear Captain Beach

The members of the Atharhaction Club, which is to be the hostess at the coming open quarterly meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs, when Captain E. E. Beach is to be the distinguished speaker, have invited the men of the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce to attend the meeting, hear Captain Beach tell of his war experiences just passed through, and to meet the captain. While the Federation meeting is called for 2:30, and will have much of special interest in the opening session, Captain Beach will not speak until half past three o'clock. Captain Beach, the commanding officer of the U. S. S. New York, is now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard but is expected to return to Kingston on Friday.

Navy Needs Men.

The navy department is anxious to speed up recruiting and to secure as many recruits as possible. Substations will be opened at once in Kingston and Newburgh in the post-office buildings. A petty officer will be in charge of the stations and applicants will be given all the information they desire about enlistment in the navy. The men most needed are: Apprentice seamen, age 17-20, firemen, aged 18-35; hospital corps, age 18-35; machinists, age 21-35; apprentice machinists, age 18-35; officers' servants, age 18-35. The lowest weight is 118 pounds, height 5 feet 2 inches. The present pay ranges from $32.50 to $38.50 a month, a clothing allowance of $300 is given to each man on his first enlistment, board, lodging and medical attention free.

WRITES OF DEATH OF PVT. THOMAS

Charles Thomas of No. 122 Chambers street has just received a letter from Lieutenant E. L. Cashin of Company A, 104th M. G. Bn., American E. F., dated December 18, informing him of the death of his son, Private Frank Thomas, who died of pneumonia. The letter follows:

"It is with a deep feeling of sorrow that I am obliged to inform you of the death of your son, Frank, at Eurelat, France, November 14, 1918. The cause of death as reported by the medical authorities was broncho-pneumonia.

"I can assure you that everything within the power of the medical officers at the hospital to which he was sent, was done to save his life, but fate had chosen him as one of her many American heroes to remain in France.

"He was truly a hero and the entire company join with me in extending to you our sympathy in this your hour of sadness. They had all learned to love and admire him for his many little acts of kindness, and for his many brave deeds performed in action, he has gained himself a place among America's list of heroes whose names are never to be forgotten and whose memories will always be cherished by future generations."

SHE HAD MONEY ENOUGH FOR TAXI

Mrs. Maria Meade of Ulster Park Had Not Spent all Her Money for Booze—It Was Black and White Day in Court.

Steam cars might be all right for some Ulster Park residents, but Mrs. Maria Meade, colored, preferred making the trip to that pretty village in a taxi, and she so informed Judge Schirick this morning when she was arraigned in police court on a charge of public intoxication.

It developed from her story that she had come to Kingston from her home in Ulster Park on Wednesday to purchase some articles, and all she had to drink was one glass of beer. That proved more than sufficient, however, for she was picked up twice from the sidewalk where she was reclining on the Strand, near Hasbrouck avenue, that evening. The second time Officer Saehloff decided the safest place for Mrs. Meade was the county jail for the night.

She was discharged on condition that she take the noon train back to Ulster Park, and it was then she informed the court she intended to go home in a taxi.

Thomas Francis Daly was picked up on Abeel street, near Ravine street, Wednesday by Officer Welch, who found him helplessly drunk. Mr. Daly was honest and confessed to the court it was due to too much whiskey. As it was his first appearance in court he was discharged. He resides on East Union street, near Broadway.

STRATFORD YARD IN NEED OF MEN

Walter Rice of Abeel Street Received Word Today That Housatonic Shipyard Needs 75 Skilled Caulkers—He Leaves Saturday.

Walter Rice of No. 112 Abeel street, a well known shipyard caulker, received word this morning from the Housatonic Shipyard at Stratford, Conn., that they were in immediate need of seventy-five first class wood ship caulkers. The job pays 89 cents an hour.

Mr. Rice will leave Kingston Saturday morning for Stratford, and if there are any shipyard workers out of work who desire a job out of town they should get in touch with Mr. Rice and leave with him.

Only skilled workers are wanted at Stratford, but here is an opportunity for any first class caulkers that may be idle at the present time.

At School No. 5.

The Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 5 will give an entertainment and dance in the school auditorium Friday evening for the purpose of raising funds to replace the portions that were destroyed in the fire that consumed the building about two years ago. It is quite a need that the school purchase three pictures, and it is expected to see the school hall crowded tomorrow night so that a goodly sum may be realized.

Junior Rally at St. John's Church.

There will be a Junior Rally at St. John's parish house on Saturday, January 25th, at 4 o'clock. All children and those interested in children's work are invited to meet with this church.

N. Y. REPUBLICANS GET ON THE WAGON

Legislative Caucus Votes, 74 to 5, to Make Party Measure of the Resolution to Ratify Prohibition.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Ratification of the federal prohibition amendment was made certain this afternoon by the assembly when Republican members in caucus voted to make ratification a party measure. Assemblymen Fearon of Onondaga, and Everett of St. Lawrence, gave the last two votes necessary not only to make it a party measure but to assure a majority when the assembly votes on the question later this afternoon. The caucus was in session one hour and fifty-five minutes. It is understood the vote was 74 to 5 but later it was made unanimous.

PEACE CONFERENCE TO FIX RESPONSIBILITY FOR WAR

Penalities For the Guilty Also to Be Considered at Saturday Session of the Peace Conference, It Is Officially Announced.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Jan. 23.—Responsibility of the authors of the war and penalties will be among the first questions considered when the plenary session of the peace conference meets again, Saturday, it was revealed by an official communique issued today.

(Consideration of responsibility and penalties evidently refers to William Hohenzollern, former German emperor, and the indication is that swift steps will be taken to bring the one time war lord to trial, if such action is deemed expedient in the interests of humanity).

The text of the official communique follows:

"At today's meeting the members of the supreme council considered the agenda of Saturday's plenary session of the conference contemplating the following questions: (1) International labor legislation; (2) responsibility for the war and penalties; (3) reparation and damages; (4) international regimes of ports and control of waterways and railroads. The meeting will also study the matter of procedure in settling territorial questions. Marshal Foch (the Allied generalissimo) and General Diaz (the Italian commander-in-chief) will attend a meeting of the Versailles war council tomorrow."

97 CASES OF FLU REPORTED IN CITY

Since the first of the year there have been 97 cases of influenza reported in Kingston, and several deaths from pneumonia, which developed fro mthe flu. The continued war weather is considered just the kind of weather to favor the spread of the disease, and residents can not be too careful to avoid catching a cold which develops into flu and then pneumonia.

A Matter of Good Faith.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 23.—In a final effort to save the president's $100,000,000 food bill, Senator Hitchcock, the senate floor leader, this afternoon admitted that the purpose was in part to save packing houses from loss. He justified the position taken by Herbert Hoover, however, on the ground that since the packers kept their promise to the food administration to buy pork at 17½ cents a pound, it was up to the food administration to keep its word to the packers and supply a market for their product.

Chamber of Commerce Invited.

The members of the Chamber of Commerce and their wives are cordially invited to attend a meeting under the auspices of the Women's Federation of Clubs at which Capt. BREAKFAST MUFFINS

2 cups flour
4 level teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
1 full tablespoon Mazola

Sift dry ingredients together, being sure that they are thoroughly mixed. Beat the egg, add it to the milk and turn into the bowl containing the dry ingredients. Add the Mazola and mix all together very quickly. Do not beat. Turn into muffin pans greased with Mazola, and bake in a moderately hot oven about 25 minutes.

—and breakfast muffins are better than ever when shortened with Mazola after this recipe

TRY Mazola—then you will understand how remarkably good it is for shortening.

Economical—use one-third to one-half less Mazola than of most shortenings.

Delicate and wholesome—comes from golden corn. Indispensable in the up-to-date kitchen.

ULSTER CO. SOCIETY ANNUAL DINNER

The invitations for the third annual banquet of the Ulster County Society to be held in the Biltmore Hotel in New York city on Washington's Birthday, Saturday evening, February 22, 1919, have been received in this city by the local members. The membership of the society now comprises 385 of old Ulster's sons and it is expected that all of them will be at the annual reunion in the Biltmore. Conditions which may have deterred some members from attendance in former years have been changed, and every member this year can easily make a special effort to attend the reunion of the boys of Ulster. The society is entering upon a new era and it is their intentions to celebrate appropriately. It is now possible to announce those who will be at the guests table. They include the Hon. Alton B. Parker, the Hon. A. T. Clearwater, Supreme Court Justice Leonard C. Crouch of Syracuse, Congressman William E. Cleary of New York, Poultney Bigelow of Malden-on-Hudson, Mayor Palmer Canfield, Jr., of this city, and Captain Louis D. B. DeLaVergne, American Expeditionary Forces, who recently returned from the front in France. The honorary president, the Hon. Edmund W. Wakelee, will preside at the gathering. All of the notables mentioned are Ulster's sons. During the last year 65 new members were added to the membership of the society.

MOMBACCUS HEIGHTS.

Mombaccus Heights, Jan. 23.—The party at Ambrose Van Etten's on Thursday evening last was another very enjoyable affair. All the usual amusements that go towards making an affair of that kind a success, and elaborate refreshments, including ice cream, were happy features of the occasion.

A few from this vicinity spent an evening last week with friends in Wawarsing.

The tax payers in this locality had the opportunity of discharging that obligation on Saturday at the store of E. L. Thomas.

Miss Josie Van Etten has gone to Bloomington to visit her brother, Robert, and wife, at their home there.

The burning out of a chimney at the home of Harry Smith, caused considerable excitement on Friday last and did some damage to the interior of the house, with smoke and soot.

Invitations are out for a birthday party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith, Tuesday evening.

An oyster supper was given by M. Green on Saturday evening at his home in this place, to the men who so kindly assisted him in moving the steam mill from Kerhonkson to its present locality. The wives and families of the men were also present and all enjoyed a delightful evening.

Mrs. Harry Smith was a recent caller on Mrs. J. Lennon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. DePuy, the Misses Rennie and Pearl Green and Harold Van Etten were callers at the Hartelius home on Sunday. Some of the young people spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. DePuy.

January White Sale

Amidst what must be to many a bewildering mass of advertising claims and counter claims; we offer the following simple and exact facts of this JANUARY SALE OF WHITE.

1—The stocks offered for sale here are regular and come from our regular manufacturers only ["regular" is a trade term for clean, standard, merchandise, every garment of unvarying excellence in design, size and finish.]

2—Our manufacturers do not cater to the low-end market and their garments are never seen there. "Low-end market" is a trade term for cut-price merchandise, ofttimes skimped in yardage and workmanship and made "at a price" to sell "at a price".

3—The prices at which we are able to sell these fine stocks average one-third less and represent business co-operation between these manufacturers and their year in and year out customers; the orders of the one keeping the factory busy in what would otherwise be a dull period and on the other hand the price concessions making possible these third-less prices, bringing great opportunties to you and helping to keep this section busy every January.

The KITCHEN CABINET

True there are neighbors with motes in their eyes;
Let's be consistent and not criticize.
True there be many afflicted with flaws;
But let's not judge them, because—well because.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

It will be years, and perhaps longer, before we will feel the freedom of the old days in regard to foods of various kinds. We have learned to sacrifice much that we thought indispensable but which has proven a blessing in results, as we feel better, work better, and will live longer because of the giving up the "overeating habit." Plain foods, well served and not too great a variety at any meal, is the order of the day.

Chili Con Carne.—This dish may be made with green beans, dried or canned. Canned kidney beans are especially good. Take a pint of beans without the liquid. Cut one pound of round steak in strips an inch long and one-fourth inch wide. Let brown in a frying pan. Skim out the meat, add to the fat two fair-sized onions cut fine and cooked until yellow. Add a can of tomatoes and heat to the boiling point; add the beans, a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of paprika and pour over the meat. Simmer gently in an earthen dish or casserole. Simmer gently three hours. Twenty minutes before serving, add one-half a green pepper cut in shreds and more salt and pepper if needed. Serve in a dish with a border of boiled rice or of mashed potato.

Poultry With Vegetables.—Dredge a fowl with rye or oat flour, put four tablespoonfuls of fat in a roaster, set in the fowl, cover and cook, turning often to see that it browns evenly. When well browned add a cupful of boiling water and six parboiled onions; cover and cook, adding more water if needed. Turn the chicken several times and when it is nearly tender add a cauliflower, broken in flowerets, and two or three carrots cut in cubes. Cook until the vegetables are tender. Serve the fowl in the center of a platter with the vegetables around it. Make a gravy from the broth in the pan.

Cider Apple Sauce.—Cook quartered sweet apples in thick boiled cider until tender. The addition of sugar will not be necessary if the apples are very sweet.

GLASCO.

Glasco, Jan. 21.—Ward Michel and "Jake" Mercurio, who have been serving Uncle Sam "away down south in Georgia," arrived on Saturday morning, honorably discharged.

The Methodist centenary organization of minute men for the Glasco M. E. Church is as follows: L. S. Hummel, chairman; John W. Lent, C. C. Myer; Henry Teitter and George Ebel.

According to the trend of coming events, the two Glasco churches will welcome some new ministerial timber as residents in the spring. Rev. N. Hess, who is just closing up a three year pastorate at the M. E. Church, expects to get a new appointment, and it is said St. Joseph's R. C. will have a resident pastor here.

The large residence property opposite the public schools on the north side of the street, belonging to the estate of Mrs. Ezra Teitter, has been sold to Italian parties. John C. Seitz has also sold the residence on the south side of the street opposite the school grounds to Italian parties.

Wednesday evening of this week the Ulster County Sunday School Association will hold their annual meeting at the Glasco M. E. Church at 7:30, conducted by the superintendent, Rev. E. P. Cole. Delegates or representatives from other schools are expected, and a general invitation is extended to all interested in Sunday school work.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Weeks are spending some time in Schenectady.

SHADY.

Shady, Jan. 22.—Miss Marguerite C. Buckhout is spending a week's vacation at her home here.

All are glad to see that Kathryn and Elizabeth Reynolds, also Edna and Ruby Gridley are out again after having the "flu."

Sunday evening the Sunday school was reorganized, the following officers being elected: Superintendent, J. E. Hoyt; assistant superintendent, Mrs. A. W. Cooper; lady superintendent, Mrs. J. C. Vanburgh; primary superintendent, Francis Vanburgh; organist, Ada Belle Nordstedt; secretary, Marguerite Burhans; librarian, Gerald Reynolds; treasurer, Mrs. L. Nordstedt.

Mrs. Reuben V. Reynolds spent a few days in Kingston the past week.

Miss Rosa Dietz is at Woodstock, where she is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. Smith.

The Misses Ethel Johnston and Genevieve Miller are at Poughkeepsie, where they are working at Forman's Mill.

The Junior Epworth League will hold their business meeting at Edith and Roberta Hoyt's Saturday afternoon, February 1.

All were shocked to hear of the death of Harry C. Brink. Much sympathy is extended to the mother and sister.

A number of people from this place attended the funeral of Adelbert Cooper at Woodstock Friday, January 17.

MAKE YOUR OWN TONIC AT HOME

FROM A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION NO. 1923
CONTAINS NO ALCOHOL OR OPIATES

If you feel tired when you get up in the morning, if you are nervous and irritable, if you cannot sleep well you need a tonic. Narcotics will not help you, alcohol will stimulate you temporarily, but will leave you in worse condition later, while Prescription 1923 produces permanent results.

The active ingredients in Prescription 1923 are Wild Cherry, Iron, Gentian and Quinine, all medicines well known to you for their valuable properties. You can make, at very small cost in your own home, a 12-ounce bottle of valuable tonic by adding to a pint bottle of Grape Juice one ounce of Home Made Tonic Prescription 1923. This prescription, written by a reputable physician, has been tried and found to give excellent results when taken three times a day as directed.

Grape Juice makes a pleasant and tonic vehicle in which to administer the Prescription. After Grippe and Influenza, this Home Made Tonic improves blood quality, helps to build up broken down tissue, improves the appetite, restores color to the cheeks and luster to the eyes, in fact you know that by properly combining the ingredients as contained in the Prescription, good results are sure to follow its use.

Medicine alone cannot prevent death, but life can be prolonged by keeping your blood pure and your body in a good healthy condition. Prescription 1923 will help to prolong your life if made at home and taken according to directions. If this prescription does not help your case do not try something else but see a reputable physician at once. Prescription 1923 is compounded from a doctor's prescription by a graduate in pharmacy.

SELECTING A HAT

Profile View More Important, Advises Fashion Critic.

Use of Hand Mirror Will Aid When Buying Headgear—More Get Side Than Front Glance.

Why do some women wear unbecoming hats, when for exactly the same price they can get one that will bring out all the good points of the face and throw the defects into shadow so that they will be scarcely noticeable? There are several reasons for this, states an authority, and the first is that many people do not seem to know just how they look in anything and are perfectly happy as long as the style is up to date; and another, and by far the most common, is that they are bewildered by a multiplicity of models. After they have tried on dozens of the wrong kinds of hats they are so tired and discouraged that they decide on the one that seems the most inoffensive of the lot. But if they understood a little more about the shapes that were suitable for them they would not need to waste all this time, but could select with more intelligence and decidedly less effort. Now it is certain that no one shape is suited to all faces. All women cannot wear large hats any more than all can wear the fashionable close-fitting styles that are so becoming to a good many. But somewhere there is a shape that was made for just your kind of face.

A hat that is long and narrow in shape should never be worn by a woman whose face is of the long, oval type, or, in other words, is long and thin. Neither should such a woman wear a hat with a very wide brim, especially if she has delicate features, for this will make her face look very commonplace and her cheeks almost emaciated. She can very becomingly wear the round turban effect, especially if it has a brim that rolls up; she can wear the continental shape; for this, though pointed in the front, is wide at the sides and thus gives her face the needed breadth. She can also wear becomingly all kinds of medium-sized sailor shapes, but as a rule does not look well in irregular hats, that is, hats that are wider on one side than the other.

The round-faced woman, on the contrary, usually finds that a toque that fits quite closely at the sides suits her best. She can wear a big hat very becomingly, and if her face is a little too broad and fat such a hat will make it look more slender. It is a mistake also for a fat woman to wear a hat so small that it makes her face look like a full moon, when if she had chosen a little bigger shape her fat cheeks would not have been brought so much into prominence.

When you buy your next hat don't stare straight at yourself in the mirror. Take a hand mirror and look carefully at yourself from all sides and be sure to get a profile view—a dozen people regard your hat from the side where one looks at it from the front. Some hats that look well on the head when one is sitting down are not nearly so becoming when one stands up, so it is well to stand before a full-length mirror to get the real effect of a hat.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

A little care in washing is all that is necessary to preserve the brightness of scarlet, pink and blue flannels for a long time. All these colors require a nice warm lather; dry soap must never be used on them, and a teaspoonful of salt should be added both to the suds and the rinsing water for scarlet and pink, and the same quantity of ammonia for blue. They should then be well shaken and hung out at once to dry. Articles of a delicate blue that must be washed are often ruined by careless washing.

Shoes that have become stiff and uncomfortable by being worn in the rain or that have been lying unused for some time, can be made soft and pliable by vaseline well rubbed in with a cloth and rubbed off with a dry one.

When cooking turnips, drop a small lump of sugar among them. It improves them wonderfully.

Do not allow the tea to brew for more than five minutes.

A Possible Cure.

Mrs. Justice—"Is there no way you can break yourself of that habit of talking in your sleep?" Mr. Just, turning in but hopefully—"Do you think it would help at all, my dear, if you'd be the talk more when I'm awake?"

The Duplex House

By JESSIE E. SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1913, Western Newspaper Union.)

When Richard Dale went to the city to get plans for some houses he intended to build on his vacant property in Wheaton, his fancy was caught by the architect's idea of a twin structure, quite popular with people who wished to live in a part of the same and rent the balance.

The "duplex" house was simply one edifice comprising two equal halves joined together with separate entrances. Each section had six rooms and a thin wall separated them.

Richard Dale's health broke down. The physicians recommended California as a permanent home. He sold off most of his realty holdings. The last one of the twin houses was left in his hands. At the first moment of his departure a sullen feeling took possession of him. Foolhardy he pronounced it the office of his attorneys.

"Parsons," he said, "you know my cousin, John Briggs?"

"Oh, yes. He was in here yesterday paying his monthly maintenance installment to his wife. She'll be in to get it today. There she is now."

"I think I would like to have a few words with her," said Mr. Dale, and as a brisk, nervous, worried looking woman entered the room he greeted her with courtesy, almost friendly warmth.

"I am glad of an opportunity to meet you before I go away," he said at once. "I am sorry, Betty, that you and John continue to live apart."

"You will oblige me by not referring to the subject, Mr. Dale," said Betty Briggs, with severity and decision. "We just couldn't get along together. It's better as it is and there can be no change."

"Very well," spoke Mr. Dale. "I naturally feel an interest in my tenants and his affairs, as well as in your own. In fact I came to see Mr. Parsons upon your mutual account. He will make a proposition to you as to each of you having a home after I am gone. I must express the hope, however, that you will no longer be foreigners and, as you should do, live in happy unison."

Betty Briggs shifted uncomfortably and slightly raised her head. Before the week was out both she and then her husband called in turn upon the lawyer to consider a truly remarkable proposition.

The lawyer had received explicit instructions from Mr. Dale, who felt kindly toward them. There was the twin house on Orchard street. He proposed that Mr. Briggs should occupy one half of it and Mrs. Briggs the other half. At the end of a year each was to receive a deed, and thus a permanent home would be guaranteed to them.

The proposal was acted upon with alacrity by John Briggs. He promptly removed his sparse furnishings into the west half of the duplex house. A week later his wife settled down into the east half. She passed her husband on the street, head high in the air, and so stern and severe was her demeanor that John, half inclined to nod, was frozen to inability by that glance.

Thus there became presented to the community the odd situation of a respectable couple, apparently parted for life, yet practically living under one and the same roof. When John came out to set out his front porch his wife kept out of view. When they met he lowered his eyes and she fixed her own steadily ahead. Then one day when she was absent John slipped over to her woodshed and split and piled up one half cord of wood. Betty was a little touched at this unexpected act of devotion, but made no outward recognition of it and time drifted on and the ice was not broken.

It was a dark, stormy night as Betty was just preparing to retire, when she started, thrilled, as from beyond the separating wall of the twin structure there sounded out a shot and then a loud cry. She seemed to catch the echo of some object falling to the floor. She was not a timid woman and the strange sounds advised her that something unusual had transpired. Her first thought was suicide. As she went to the back door and noted two men running across the yard she divined the real situation—robbery, perhaps murder!

Mrs. Briggs was over the fence, spry as a schoolboy. The rear door of the east house was open. She dashed into the house, to come upon her husband lying weltering in blood upon the floor.

A cabinet had been ransacked and the evidences of robbery were patent. John was insensible and the blood was trickling from a wound in his temple. Betty was prompt in tearing away his shirt. Then she rushed for water and cloths. A bullet had grazed the temple and furrowed a widening course. As she ministered to the stricken man she noted, suspended by a faded string of ribbon around his neck a small miniature. It was a portrait of herself she had given him years ago, and at this evidence of his fidelity she burst into tears and bent down and kissed him just as he opened his eyes.

When a doctor called he simply commended the prompt and sensible administration of Betty. She volunteered to act as nurse. The day John Briggs sat up convalescent he ordered a door cut connecting the twin apartments and the duplex house became their common abode, the past forgotten, the future beckoning them on with golden promise.

Learned Great Truth Early.

Son has just begun to go to school and has much to say about the new little girls he meets, but every few days it is a different girl that attracts him. His mother said, "I'm afraid, son, that you are changeable." He answered, "Taint me that changes; it's them, when you know them better."

One Definition of Envy.

"Envy," said Uncle Eben, "is one of de unpleasant symptoms 'experienced by folks dat has been tryin' to git somethin' fob nothin'."

The Tsetse Fly.

The dreaded "tsetse fly (pronounced tset-se, accent on first syllable, whose vowel e has short sound, as in set) is an African gadfly, about the size of a housefly. The symptoms of its victim are at first those of a severe cold. The eyes, nose and mouth begin to "run," the body then swells while emaciation sets in, although not always fatal. The harm done is found to be not the result of poison from the fly itself, but communication to the blood of its victim of a microscopic parasite similar to that of Texas fever which it has received from a diseased animal. Animals or persons that recover are usually immune. The great dread of this fly formerly entertained has proved to be unjustified.

The Long Arm.

The war has furnished many strange coincidences. Here is another. A young officer came home on leave and brought his fiancee a piece of a shell fired by the Germans, but which had evidently been among ammunition captured from us. He thought it would interest her, and it did, for she was able to identify it as having come from the munition works in which she worked. It interested her still more when she found her own mark on it.

LOOTING NOT NEW.

The Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross has received and put on sale in New York, for the benefit of wounded American soldiers, an unusual gift described as "ten jade historical tablets held by the edges in as many pockets of a twelve-foot strip of imperial yellow gold cloth" and as "loot from the Sacred Temple of Ancestors in the Forbidden City of Pekin, China." Discussing an "old shame," the New York Sun calls for a philanthropist "jealous of his country's honor" to buy these jades not only to aid our wounded soldiers but in order to return the stolen property to China where it belongs.

What happened when the Christian nations relieved the besieged legations at Pekin during the Boxer outbreak is graphically suggested by the published assertion of General James H. Wilson, in command of the American forces there, that "diplomats and missionaries as well as soldiers helped themselves without hesitation to abandoned property, porcelains, furs and curios generally." This "old shame" is only one of many. Looting has accompanied the march of practically every invading army. The Germans are not the only sinners in this particular. The difference is that in their case it was officially ordered, was amazing in its thoroughness and shamelessly brutal in its execution, not only breaking all previous records but rendering these trivial by comparison.

It is pretty rough on successful "captains of industry" to say, as some have been saying, that Mr. Roosevelt's modest fortune proves his honesty, for this implies that a large fortune is presumptive evidence of rascality, which by no means necessarily follows. Mr. Roosevelt was interested in more important things than money making, which of itself sufficiently explains why he left an estate of less than half a million. As a matter of fact, he was one of the richest of our presidents, having about twice the fortune of George Washington, who, by the way, was the richest American of his time.

Dissatisfaction over the slow return of the soldiers to civil life is said to be increasing in England as well as in the United States. There is no such dissatisfaction in France where, on the contrary, alarming voices are raised against any demobilization whatever until Germany has been forced to accept the dictated peace. After living in the fear of unscrupulous Germany for half a century, the French have become wary as well as wise. They don't want to see the peace terms rejected because there are no armies ready to command acceptance.

Senator J. Ham Lewis says stranger things might happen than to see President Wilson a candidate for a third term. Third term seeking, being no longer new, can not be called strange, but the late Colonel Roosevelt, who tried for his "third cup of coffee" in vain, would perhaps have described it as more fascinating than wise.

According to the New York World, a certain senator has honestly earned the distinction of "making a fool of himself more regularly and more consistently than any other member of that body." On account of the continuously remarkable behavior of several who might be named, readers will be in doubt as to the identity of the senator referred to.

Although the new world has but 14 per cent of the population represented at the Peace Conference, it holds 24 per cent of the delegates, for the old world will have the majority vote and the American view can depend only on diplomacy and persuasion.

A Berlin editor says that "in spite of the courtesy of the German papers" Mr. Roosevelt was "one of Germany's most bitter enemies." The assumption appears to be that a foreigner so honored as to be praised by the Berlin press ought to be pro-German for life no matter what crimes Germany might commit.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"It pays to be honest." "But not enough, apparently, to suit some people."—Boston Transcript.

Solo Was Appropriate.

Miss Singwell had been a member of the choral society ever since it had been in existence, and it was undoubtedly true that her first youth had waned. But the choirmaster was astounded recently by the news that she had resigned her membership.

"Resigned!" he gasped. "But whatever for?"

Well, I don't know exactly," said the secretary, "but it strikes me that it may have something to do with the solo we picked for her at the next performance."

"Don't you remember? It begins, 'I once was young, but now am old.' "—Philadelphia Record.

Her Status in Doubt.

The exact status of a mother-in-law was brought into question by an Irishman in New York. He was sending a money order to France. In conformity with a new regulation the clerk asked him if the money was destined to aid the enemy in any manner.

The Irishman scratched his head. "Is the addresse an allien enemy?" demanded the clerk.

"Be jabers, I don't know at all," was the reply. "It's for my mother-in-law."—Exchange.

Nothing of the Kind.

The Germans were shelling a section held by the American troops not long ago, and one American said to another: "This sure is hell," and his buddie looked at him and said:

"Are you married?"

"No."

"Well you you've got a lot to learn."—Exchange.

LEIBHARDT.

Illness prevented several of the young people from attending the surprise party at the home of Miss Josephine Barley at Whitfield on Monday evening.

Influenza doesn't wait for an invitation. It comes just the same in many homes and it came to Leibhardt last week in nearly every family and Dr. Hanker was called to William J. Brown's, where four of his children were sick; to Vernon Barnhardt and his little son, Peter; to Miss Gladys Carter, to Herman Quick's to treat his little baby son; to Alexander Brown; to L. E Lawrence; to Peter DeWitt and to Abe Hendrickson, and the four children of Henry DeWitt have been very ill.

D. Meade Brown attended the Sunday school banquet that was held in the M. E Church at Ellenville last Friday evening.

Mrs. Andrew Gullickson has recently returned from a four weeks' pleasant visit in New York.

Mrs Floyd Dejew has returned home in Accord after a few days visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Uriah Quick.

Allen Hornbeck of Whitfield made a trip to this place last Saturday, spending about one hour in town. Come again, Allen, as the influenza patients are all on the main and will be pleased to see you.

We are glad to hear Uncle Peter DeWitt is better.

There was a small attendance at school this week.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Monman, who were sick last week, are improving

Mrs Uriah Quick entertained a company of ladies at her home on Wednesday. Those who enjoyed the visit were Mrs Henry Keon and daughter, Mrs. Russell Clevenger, Mrs. Simon Miller and Mrs James Miller of Metucahonts

At present all the sick are reported in the gain

Removing Paint From Glass.

Ordinary commercial ammonia is a quite efficient remover of paint, especially from glass. Apply with a cloth swab. Within 15 or 20 minutes the paint will be so softened that it may easily be rubbed off with a putty-like or a coarse fabric.

HERE AND THERE ABOUT THE TOWN

The Stroller Hears That Pickerel Fishing Through the Ice Is Fine Sport—A Tale of a Pickerel and a Red Cloth.

"Well I guess I will take a day off soon," remarked the busy barber as the customer entered the shop to look over the newspaper.

"How is that?" asked the customer, "some one sick?"

"Nope," replied the barber, "but a fellow was just in and was telling me about the fine mess of pickerel he caught yesterday."

"I did not know you could catch pickerel this time of the year," said the customer.

"They fish through the ice," explained the barber and they tell me that the pickerel they catch now are better eating than in the summer."

"How is that?" asked the customer.

"The flesh is harder and firmer they say," explained the barber.

"What kind of bait do you use?" queried the customer.

"Live bait," said the barber, "either hard heads or shiners, although some claim shiners are the best."

"And talking about fishing through the ice and the kind of bait to use this fellow told me a queer one."

"Shoot it along," said the customer.

"He said he had been fishing all day and had not got a bite on one of the lines," said the barber, "and so he decided to pull the line up and trust to luck with the other lines he had in the water. In pulling the line up n some way the red cloth he had tied to one end of the line fell in the water.

"He managed to grab it before he lost the line and as he grabbed it he felt one awful tug."

"He pulled hard, and what do you think?"

"I don't think," said the customer "what happened."

"When he finally pulled the line in he found that he had hooked a pickerel. The blame fish had caught hold of the red cloth and bit so hard his teeth became entangled in the cloth and he was easily landed."

THOSE SHOE BILLS! —KEEP THEM DOWN

Mr. John Held, merchant, of Salt Lake City, keeps an exact record of the shoes he wears. He writes, "Two pairs of Neolin Soles have worn for me 19 months and I am on my feet ninety per cent of the time."

This is not an extraordinary example of the money-saving service that people get from Neolin Soles. It is typical of the experience millions are having. These soles do wear a very long time and so help you keep shoe bills down. They are scientifically made so they must wear.

Get Neolin-soled shoes at almost any good shoe store. Get them for your whole family in the styles you prefer. And have these cost-saving soles put on your worn shoes. They are very comfortable and waterproof as well as durable. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels, guaranteed to outwear any other heels.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The members of Ulster Garden Club are requested to meet at the residence of Mrs. Everett Fowler on Maiden Lane at 1:15 o'clock Friday afternoon to attend the funeral of Mrs. Julia Dillon.

A birthday surprise in honor of Miss Edna Krom, 34 Post street, consisting of an automobile party of eight, driven where a chicken supper awaited them. They arrived at an early hour, wishing Edna many happy birthdays.

The Monday Club will meet at the home of Mrs. R. D. Clearwater, 210 Washington avenue, on Friday at 1 o'clock to attend the funeral of Mrs. Julia McEntee Dillon in a body. Mrs. Dillon was an honorary member of the Monday Club.

All members of the Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., are requested to meet on Friday at 1 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Ralph D. Clearwater, 210 Washington avenue, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Julia McEntee Dillon, an honorary and charter member of Wilt-

On Friday evening a party of young people hiked to the Bell farm in Union Center and tendered George Bell, who had just been discharged from the army, a surprise party. During the evening games and dancing were enjoyed by all. At midnight dainty refreshments were served and in the wee small hours of the morning the young folks departed for home voting Mr. Bell a royal entertainer. Those present were the Misses Antoinette and Helen Clair, Helen Stout, Anna Bell, Anna and Katheryn Cole and the Messrs. Edward Mains, Anthony Benz, Fred Stout, Henry Bell, George Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell and Mrs. Miller.

It was not the popular army mess of beans that Company M offered their guests at their annual banquet last night in the armory, but a real menu headed with roast turkey and followed on the list by every possible accessory necessary for the serving of a delicious course dinner. This year the local company of soldiers entertained as their guests the Ambulance Corps of the Home Defense and the performers who gratefully offered their services for the entertainment of the soldiers and sailors and their families in the armory following the banquet at 7:30 o'clock. The serving started promptly at 6 o'clock and every one was furnished with a bountiful supply of good things to eat at the hands of the caterer, Mrs Daley, assisted by Carl Preston and a corps of kitchen police from Company M.

A large number of subscriptions have already been paid in for the private subscription dance to be given in St. Mary's Hall on Tuesday evening, February 11th. This dance has long been an anticipation upon the minds of those familiar with the subscription dances of recent years and promises to be one of the greatest successes of the winter dance season. The individual promoting this affair has long since won an enviable place in the hearts of the dance lovers of the city and has promised the subscribers a gathering of young people never before gotten together on one floor in Kingston. The feature of these dances has been the refreshments under the direction of Theron Mowers and this year will bring no change on this part of th program. A surprise will be in store in the line of music, which will be furnished by the famous "Curt" Shurter orchestra. By request from out of town guests the affair will be of an informal nature and this alone adds ease to the minds of many who intend not to miss this, the only subscription dance of the social season in this city.

Benson-Townsend.

Miss Mabel Townsend of Highland and Walter Benson of Buffalo were quietly married Sunday noon by Rev. Charles E. Pyle of the Trinity M. E. Church of Poughkeepsie. Immediately after the ceremony they left for an extended trip through Virginia, stopping at Washington and other points of interest, after which they will make their home in Syracuse, where Mr. Benson holds a responsible position as civil engineer and is engaged in construction work for the New York Central Railway Co. Mrs. Benson is a graduate of the Highland High School and the New Paltz Normal. For several years she has held a position as successful teacher in the schools of Ossining, where she made many friends. These with her Highland friends join in extending to her their heartiest wishes for her future happiness.

How to Tackle Business.

There's satisfaction in getting down to business.

It's a worry when you feel the responsibility resting upon you and you can't change the weight. To be able to get down to business after every interruption, to take up the thread where it was dropped without having to go back, makes a man feel like a conqueror. This consciousness of strength helps him master trials without worry. That leaves a reserve for other demands that shows a man's strength. Once feel that you are master of your own self and the problems that confront you and you can tackle double duty and get away with it. It's a matter of getting down to business and letting other things go. It's the mark of success offered the many but mastered by the few. Be one of them.

How Flying Tanks Operate.

One of the reasons why the Germans quit was that the flying tank was coming into large use by the allies. The Huns had learned to dread any hint of a tank but their own. The flying tank is an armored battleplane that could not be punctured by small artillery and the business it could do with the enemy was something fierce.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us in our recent bereavement; also for the numerous floral offerings.

BOYS' CLUBS TEACH THRIFT AND INDUSTRY AND HELP TO MAKE PROGRESSIVE FARMERS

Club Members Learn More Than Principles of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Agricultural production is not the sum total of achievement by members of boys' clubs in the South. Those youngsters below the Mason-Dixon line raise good crops; also, they raise fine baby beeves and standard pigs. Their sheep are of accredited breeds; their poultry is of the better types; and the gardens they cultivate are model gardens, many of them yielding very worth-while produce. In dollars and cents, the result of those boys' efforts annually mounts up to many thousands; in food supply it is of incalculable value to the 15 Southern states.

But this is only part of the story—a bare enumeration of some of the activities of those Southern lads. The other part is, or should be, more interesting, for it deals with intangible commodities—character, high ideals, educational aspirations, civic pride—evolved from and developed through the training received in boys' clubs. In its effort to strengthen the agricultural extension organization the United States department of agriculture cites some instances to show the benefits of the boys' club work in the South.

Bond and Bank Accounts.

In Texas there are 1,000 boys receiving higher education—the direct result of club membership. There are 20,000 club boys in that state who bought Liberty bonds, War Savings and Thrift stamps. The same number belong to the Red Cross, and 2,000 have bank accounts. Members of the boys' clubs in Oklahoma, over 13,000, own war securities amounting to $112,818. Their bank deposits total $67,931.86. Also, West Virginia has 1,500 club members who have bank accounts. Many own lands and several hundred are in colleges. Arkansas has a record of hundreds of former boys' club members who are in college, and what is more to their credit, paying their tuition with money earned from the sale of their agricultural products and prizes won in agricultural contests.

A number of the Southern clubs have developed college professors, instructors in agricultural schools—men who learned the scientific method of farming and gained their experience in boys' clubs. Many club members are in the military service. "We have hundreds of club members that are officers in the United States army," writes a Mississippi state agent. Nor have modern business methods been overlooked by those young husbandmen. In some of the states co-operative buying, selling and marketing is the regular practice of boys' club members, and the use of banking facilities, a common custom—the kind of banking, by the way, where the character and industry of the borrowers form the major part of the security. In this connection the testimony of the president of a bank in Mississippi is corroborative. Says he: "So far as my information goes, there is not a single piece of bad paper in the state as a result of loans to club boys." These instances are taken at random.

The influence club boys exert upon their fathers and upon the farmers in their neighborhoods is very marked, state and county agents say. It is the kind of influence that, through practical demonstration, turns skeptics into converts; that makes progressive farmers out of "the-old-way-is-good-enough-for-me" types.

Influence of the Clubs.

But extension agents are not the only ones who note these transformations. Men of affairs have observed them, and right ready are they to tell of civic improvements, better schools, more active churches, marked increase in the demand for better merchandise, new business enterprises, pride in the appearance of their buildings, home grounds, the family acres, and a higher type of community morale—all brought about by boys' clubs and community co-operation.

Increased production, stimulation in every line of agricultural endeavor for the immediate and continued prosperity of their section is one of the important functions of boys' club work in the South. This is being accomplished by instruction and demonstration in correct agricultural methods by the extension service of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges. And it is being done in the only way possible—through the organized efforts of the very boys who are to develop into progressive farmers and become the substantial producers of the future. However, quite as important a function of this work is the all-round development of the boys themselves. Great stress is laid upon this. Through the agency of these boys' clubs, the members are taught habits of thrift and industry. They are shown the real value of high character, the advantages of education, the possibilities of leadership, the dignity of labor, the importance of co-operation in civic affairs and respect for others' rights. The creditable desire for independence, for land ownership and beauty and orderliness in land possessed is inculcated in them, that they may have the privilege of remaining upon the very soil that nurtured them and become important factors in their country's development.

JOINTWORM IS MOST DESTRUCTIVE ENEMY

Pest Ranks Next to Hessian Fly in Eastern States.

Small Grub Lives in Stems of Wheat, Sucking Juices of Plant—May Be Controlled by Plowing Stubble Deeply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The most destructive enemy of wheat, next to the Hessian fly, in the wheat states east of the Mississippi river and in parts of Missouri is the wheat jointworm. It is a very small grub which lives in the stems of wheat, sucking the juices of the plant and causing a swelling in the stem. Although this insect is sometimes more serious than the Hessian fly, occasionally causing complete destruction, very little is done at present to control its depredations. The insect has a number of natural enemies, but these should not be relied upon. Fortunately the jointworm attacks only wheat, which fact suggests one of the most reliable control measures, that of substituting crops. In the southern part of the Eastern wheat belt the insect may be controlled by plowing wheat stubble deeply after harvest when this does not interfere with the growing of red clover and grass.

The egg from which the jointworm hatches is laid in the stem by an insect resembling a small black ant with wings. When a wheat plant first becomes infected no outward sign may appear. The presence of the worm can be detected when the plant is nearly mature by examining the inside of the stem, usually just above the second or third joint from the ground. Sometimes the point of infestation is very noticeable, there being wart-like swellings on the stem. Another very good indication is the presence in the field of a number of fallen or lodged plants.

The larvae of this insect remain in the old stubble until November or December, when about 90 per cent of them change to the pupa stage. In this form large numbers are winter-killed in the Northern states, but severe weather also kills their natural enemies. Without the assistance of numerous parasitic enemies of the jointworm, wheat growing in the Eastern states of necessity would have been abandoned or the growers forced to adopt effective control measures, say department specialists.

When fall plowing is practiced the stubble containing the pest is buried deeply, thus preventing the insect from emerging the following spring. Whenever this method is adopted the badly infested wheat should be cut high, so that the greater majority of the jointworms will be left on the field in the old stubble and may be turned under and destroyed. In southern Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and other Southern and Southeastern states where double-cropping systems are in general use, it is possible to plow under the stubble without interfering with the cropping system. Where this is not practicable, as is sometimes the case in the more Northern states, substitute crops, such as rye, barley or buckwheat should be sown on heavily infested areas.

BETTER ROADS IN LOUISIANA

State to Spend $4,674,000 in Making Improvements and Maintenance During Year.

According to figures compiled in the office of the state highway engineer, $4,674,000 will be spent on road improvement in Louisiana in 1919 in the constructing of 238 miles of highway and maintenance of 470 miles already completed.

Life's Jesters.

"It seems very strange," observed the almost-philosopher, "that the persons who regard this life as a huge joke are the ones who say they can see no point to it."

Fact and Fancy.

Said the facetious observer: "One of the principal differences between the frugal woman and the fat one is that one tries to reduce expenses and the other expenses."

HERRING FISHERS DO WELL

Splendid Catches and High Prices Have Been the Rule Among Them for Many Years Now.

The herring fisher works always on the night shift, not because the fish feed at night—herring take no known bait—but because they can be seen at night.

Taking their cue from the whale or seagull as to the location of the herring, the boats go off two by two (for they work always in couples) late in the evening to the fishing ground. Arrived there, they stop their motors, and gliding silently over the dark waters they look for the fish.

One of the men bumps the anchor two or three times on the bow of the boat, and instantly a patch of water lights up with a bright phosphorescent gleam. It is the herring, and the ringnet (now more generally used in the west of Scotland than the driftnet) is lowered. It is held up by corks and has a small light at one end. This the partner boat picks up; they circle around the herring until the two boats come together, when most of the men climb into one boat, where they draw the net, with the herring, on board.

In this little Highland village the men of the last two generations have done well with the fishing. Their boats, complete with nets and motor, cost between £500 and £600, but only the other night a couple of boats, owned by brothers, divided £250 between them for one night's catch.—London Mail.

COMFORT BAGS PLEASE ALL

Nothing Given Out by the Red Cross Is More Appreciated by the Soldiers on Service.

The following is an extract from a letter of a Red Cross hospital representative.

"The men like the comfort kits better than anything the Red Cross gives them. We have asked dozens of them what they like best of all that is given them—tobacco, magazines, sweaters, etc.—and they all say at once the comfort kits and toilet articles. They come in from the front without even a toothbrush, and when I send the bags around by the other patients, they come back and say: 'Say, you oughter see how pleased those guys were—they said it was just like Christmas. They were all sitting up in bed looking at the things in their bags.'

"The other day one man who had lost his right hand, called me over to him and said: 'Here, I'll donate my sewing-kit. My wife has got to do mine after this. I'm out of it. You can give this to some other fellow who needs it.' He had heard the others asking for sewing-kits all down the ward. They are in great demand and very hard to get."

Gift From French Republic.

Three phrases from President Wilson's war messages will be woven in a costly Gobelin tapestry France is having made as a gift to the city of Philadelphia. The tapestry is to be hung in the museum in the Quaker city and is about to be placed in the hands of the workers at the famous Gobelin factory for completion, according to an exchange.

The tapestry will be 21 feet by 15 feet. It will be full of life and color and will have an atmosphere of enthusiasm and patriotism in portraying troops departing from Philadelphia for Europe to participate in the war of justice.

"Right is more precious than peace."

"We have no selfish end to serve and desire no conquest and no domination."

"We shall fight for democracy."

Horsemen Knew Their Business.

The value of having practical horsemen in charge of remount camps is shown in questions made for shelter. When it came to building the great depots required at each of the camps they ordered open sheds instead of barns—or for the severe northern climate, sheds closed on one side. To the city-bred humanitarian who saw thousands of Uncle Sam's horses and mules standing out in the cold, this seemed cruel, and complaint was entered. But by practical test it was shown that the horsemen were right. Those animals which were housed up did not thrive as well as the ones which were kept in the open. When talking with the head of the remount division the thing he was most proud of was the fact that our horses were kept in better condition with fewer losses, than the horses of England or France, and that we did this with a much smaller man force, largely because we give them open-air treatment.

Lookouts Develop New Disease.

"Eye work is perhaps the biggest part of submarine hunting," writes William G. Shepherd, in Everybody's, "and it has its evils and penalties. Woe to the man on a destroyer who is gifted with that strange, unexplainable talent of being able to see by night. There he such. His is almost a 24-hour-a-day task. And he finally gets the 'periscope eye' and is sent ashore to get well, if he can. His eyes weep tears of pus by day and, after sleep, his lids are glued together with granulation. It is a new disease of this mad century.

"You keep looking through these high-powered binoculars like an old lady reading through her spectacles, one of the boys explained to me, 'until finally they seem to be pulling your eyes out of their sockets.'"

Didn't Look It.

"What would you say," asked the fair theosophist, "if I should tell you that I was born in Egypt three thousand years ago?"

"Why," said the man addressed, "I should say you don't look it."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Too Dangerous.

"Here's a story about a girl who swallowed a diamond ring."

"She was a very foolish girl. A diamond ring is too rich for anybody's digestion."

How Huns Maligned British.

Away back to Jeanne d'Arc went the Germans in their attempt to get up a rookus between Great Britain and France during the recent war.

In newspapers copiously illustrated and written in French the Boches hoped to persuade the poilu that all was wrong with the Tommy. How they must have improved the morale of the allies by the mirth they created.

Two samples of these newspapers, La Guerre Qui Vient, and L'Anglais tel qu'il est, were recently received by Mrs. Dorothy Llewellyn Field from her husband, Lieut. Ralph E. Field, Twenty-sixth Engineers, A. E. F.

Portraits of plump British colonels photographing starving Hindus, of British sportsmen tying dusky babies to the trees of the river bank as bait for crocodile. Great Britain represented on the map as an octopus (none of whose tentacles established any revolution during the war!)—all these and many other items give the British a rare showing up.

And you should see how the missionaries and the Salvation army are laid out! So it happened that on November 11——

How Monument Was Started.

Many months ago a girl—the sweetheart of a soldier at Camp Devens, Mass.—brought to the camp a bit of stone from her home and gravely laid it on a designated spot. That little action was the beginning of the sweetheart's monument.

In the months following, other girls, the rich and the poor, from the coast fishing villages and the Berkshire hills, brought bits of stone and laid them close to the first.

Today where the first piece of rock was laid, there is a tall shaft composed of hundreds of multi-colored stones. It was dedicated as the sweetheart's monument and has a bronze tablet with the inscription: "To the memory of those who at the call of humanity laid aside their vocations to become soldiers in the grand army of liberty."

RATHER MEET SATAN THAN COLORED UNITS

Sergeant Clemons Writes of the Fighting Spirit of Colored American Troops—Meets His Friend Corporal Fitzgerald.

D. G. Atkins has received the following letter from Sergeant Clarence S. Clemons, one of Kingston's colored soldiers, who gives the fighting colored man's views of the war and the way it should have ended:

Army and Navy
Young Men's Christian Association
"With the Colors."
Dec. 12, 1918.

Hon. D. G. Atkins:

Dear Sir:—The battalion to which I am attached was up but in no way did it take part in what proved to be the final push of the Yanks. It reminded me and made me feel like the "Doughboy" who reached the front a day after it was all over, he sat on a rock, hands and gun between his legs cigarette in his mouth and tin helmet way back on his head a picture of despair he said. "Trained three months, studied French six weeks, seasick ten days coming over—here I am with nothing to look at but shell holes and tourists, no souvenirs left but tin cans. Who signed the armistice? H—l of a note."

Oh the dirty Fritzs If the boys had their way it wouldn't have been over until they have taken the water out of the Rhine and mopped up the other half of Germany with it. I've got a .45 Colt automatic and I haven't had a bit of target practice. They would rather meet the old boy himself than run into some of the colored units that's over here. You should have seen, oh, any part of that five million dollar barrage the Yanks sent over, and when the boys went over in search of their enemies they were not to be found, so they had to be loaded in truck to catch up to them, that's how fast they made their getaway. Then came the armistice. They knew the Allies had them going—could dent their line any where or at any time—so they squealed just like so many pigs, I'm still in favor of giving them back just what they handed out to Belgium and France, that's justice.

In the advance zone, I have failed to see a town that wasn't bombarded and in the towns, villages, etc., have failed to see a house that wasn't knocked down or suffering from shell shots. It seems worse than the pictures I saw back home. However, it's over and I'm thinking now of returning home. Of course I haven't any idea how soon, but I'll be home

I've had one day off so I went to Verdun, the Frogs wouldn't let an American soldier in the underground city—I was quite disappointed, so were thousands of others—so I tramped back home, wet, cold, hungry and mad clear through

Another day I took off and went to Montfocon to see my boy friend, Fitzgerald, he was glad to see me, you may be sure. He had just been made a corporal—good for him. Just had time to say Hello and so-long—Oh, it's great traveling over here—you blunder on to the place you want to go to. Just think of it hooking an auto ride and dodging M. P.'s. Give my regards to all the boys.

Here's two little cards wishing you the Christmas greetings and a Happy New Year. I would be glad to hear from you and others. I am as ever,

Very truly yours,

HIGHLAND.

Highland, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Orsen Sheeley was a shopper in Poughkeepsie on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. William Hasbrouck, Mrs. Angelo Hasbrouck, Mrs. John Dusenberrie, Mrs. James S. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ehrichson, Mrs. Chester Atkins, Mrs. Vincent Jordon, Miss Emma Paltridge, Mrs. Townsend Abrams, Mrs. Nathan Williams, Miss Alma Rhoades, Miss Doretta Gedney and Jacob J. Donovan were among the many pleasure seekers Monday afternoon, when they all enjoyed a good play at the Opera House, Poughkeepsie, and on Tuesday many of us went to the same place to see the play, "Going Some," and every one who felt as if they had the "blues" came out of that idea, for they laughed every moment at this play, one of the greatest hits of the season.

Thursday afternoon, Mrs. F. L. Metcalf opened her home for the W. C. T. U. meeting, which was well attended. These people were delighted to hear the good news of the "states going dry." That is good news to every one; only hope it continues. A delightful afternoon was spent and every one departed in a very happy mood.

Sorry to hear of the severe illness of LeGrand Haviland. He has an attack of influenza. They have in attendance a nurse, and we hear he is now on the gain, which we are very glad to know.

James Westcott of Maple avenue was out of town on Monday on important business.

Mrs. James Nickerson is very anxious for time to pass on now, as in a few weeks she expects to have her son, Ezra, home. He was due in New York city the 21st, but has to remain there for a short time before allowed to come on here.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Smith are both very ill. Mr. Smith was gaining nicely, when last week one day, he was up and around, had a relapse and is in bed again. His wife has had convulsions, and at present writing is seemingly in a very bad condition. Their friends are anxiously awaiting some good news of improvement from them.

Mrs. C. E. Baldwin of Maple avenue has been spending some time in New York city with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Orsen Sheeley had several guests last Friday evening. Cards and other games were the pastime of the evening, and refreshments were served, and everyone had a very delightful time.

Sorry to report the serious illness of Mrs. William Feeter, Sr. They have a trained nurse in attendance, and her many friends are looking forward to the good news of her rapid improvement.

Tuesday evening we attended the Grange meeting and our master, Abram P. Wilklow had a very good session planned out. Installation was one of the proper things of the evening and a short program, and the last pleasure of the evening was the refreshments, and we knew they would be good, as Mr. and Mrs. George Eyett and Mr. and Mrs. George Brown were the ones to furnish it, and when they are on for eats, we try and get there, knowing we will get just what we go after, something good.

Last Friday evening there were a jolly lot of people met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ehrichson, where a party was given in honor of Louis Werner, who left on Saturday in company of the Gregories for Texas. Everyone present just had one enjoyable time. They kept it up till late, and hated to have Louis go. He will be missed for he was quite a useful boy around and surely his chums will miss him and his people will hardly know how to get along without him. Yet it may be a good move for him, and we all wish him success in his new undertaking.

The library held another game party Tuesday evening; 25 cents for each one to pay and play dominoes or any game you saw fit. This is for the support of the library.

Mrs. S. E. Harper of Clintondale is at present at the home of Mrs J. S. Mack on Grand street, taking care of Mrs. Nash.

In last week's issue of news the party who gave the items to the reporter omitted in the Daughters of America's meeting, the installation of officers, so we wish at this time to state all officers were properly installed by Mrs Phoebe Cobb of Kingston, who is the deputy state councilor for Ida McKinley Council.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram Rhoades entertained Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Lamoureo last week, it being the doctor's birthday. They had a royal good time.

Theron DuBois, who has been ill for over two weeks with rheumatism, is improving slowly, which is good news to his friends. Hope to soon see him out and able to attend to business

Music Study Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wilcox Tuesday afternoon. There was a good attendance and they gave a program as usual, which was enjoyed. At the close refreshments were served and the members left with pleasant recollections of the meeting and its genial host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whittaker of this place were recent visitors in New York city. While there they had a very pleasant time, combining business and pleasure.

Rev. Foster A. Coons and wife were in Poughkeepsie Monday and were to see Ethel Churchill, who is in the hospital, following an operation. She is getting along fine.

O. E. S. of this place held their regular meeting Monday evening.

Mrs. Frank Rosenbergs was in Poughkeepsie first of the week on business and pleasure.

Many from this place were in attendance at the Junior Poughkeepsie for the auto show. The decorations were all that could be desired. The ladies were in fine attire. The display of cars was great and they were certainly very beautiful in their spick and span spring array. The electrical effects were certainly more than beautiful and to be frank we think this will outdo all previous affairs.

January 25th to February 1st find out at the store of W. E. Wilcox & Son, and see what you can find there in their sale at that time at reduced prices. Now we know they have many dependable articles that some of you will want and they say their prices are just to suit everybody's purse. They will be glad to see you and will show you goods and all in their employ will treat everyone most courteously. Everything of quality and many things for comfort are seen right in their store. Go and see and convince yourselves that we are correct in our statement.

If you want to have something first class to drink and then some good jam to put on your bread and cakes for breakfast, just go down on Vineyard avenue, stop at the famous Schuble Grape Juice Company's establishment and there you can test the drink and grape jam. There is not anything made or put on the market to equal it. They say, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." We have tasted it and know just what we are talking about. They are at present filling large orders and will continue to do so as long as they put out such good articles.

Last Sunday evening there was a large congregation at the M. E. Church and the people were surprised when the pastor, Rev. F. A. Soons, announced that there was present a sailor who was one of the M. E. Sunday school, who was here for a short furlough, and that young man proved to be Albert Percival. He gave a very interesting talk on his going over seas and operating wireless on the seaplanes and of their capturing several U-boats. He was out on a boat that helped to bring the president of the United States and his party in safely to France and he gave many [illegible] ences and incidents during his [illegible] there in war which were of great [illegible] terest to every one present. It [illegible] very evident that he, with many [illegible] ers of our boys, have gone through more hardships than we realize and many of them will return to us [illegible] out a scratch, which is marvelous.

Vital Statistics of Japan.

According to statistics recently published the population of Japan proper on December 31, 1917, was 57,096,[illegible] distributed among 10,241,851 dwellings or 5.7 per cent habitation. Compared with the census of 1916, a growth in population of 739,096 is seen. The rate of increase exceeds 1 per cent.

HOME GUARD HONORS RETURNED SOLDIERS

Will you ever forget November 11, 1918, when the people of Kingston welcomed the news of the signing of the armistice? Will the soldiers and sailors of Kingston, and all who helped to make that day possible, ever forget the evening of January 22, 1919, when Company M. N. Y. N. G., welcomed them back to their old home town with an entertainment that will linger in their memories for years to come? The realization of what November 11 of last year actually meant was brought more close to the parents of this city last night as they proudly watched their manly sons stroll the armory floor clad in the different uniforms of Uncle Sam's fighting forces and with that satisfied smile that they had turned the trick on the Kaiser, as had their ancestors on other tyrants in past wars. Just imagine over 500 of these fellows, all appreciative of the celebration in their honor, in such a reunion after all they have done for us in bringing about the glorious defeat of the Huns who had been invading and crushing innocent countries for three years previous to America's appearance on the scene. It was a celebration from start to finish and Company M members sure proved their respect for the boys who went away while they remained at home always on the alert for any emergency that might arise from enemies within our gates.

Every branch of the service was represented by men from overseas and those not so fortunate as to receive a real taste of the fight. "The "gobs" were there in their dress "blues" of the navy and quite noticeable was the number of gold chevrons worn by the sailors for overseas service accompanied by that sea-going swing of a real sea-faring tar. It was plainly evident that the navy was the attraction for most of the men below age, as the sailors greatly outnumbered the soldiers present. Most of our Kingston sailors have sailed the high seas, too, and we are justly proud of them for the manner in which they safely conveyed our many troops across the submarined waters. The "dough-boys" speak for themselves. We all know who made the Germans in such a hurry to get out of the territory that they had only recently gained with heavy losses and those who today are keeping them where they belong with the army of occupation in Germany were represented by their proud parents last evening.

At 7 o'clock sharp the famous Schoenfag jazz band played concert music for the entertainment of the guests with Irving Spector on the violin, and continued until the doors were closed for admittance at 7:45 and every one in the crowded drill shed were seated. One of the featured effects of originality that brought the house down with surprise was the sprinkling of confetti and small American flags over the heads of the audience as the bugler blew call to the colors. This was accomplished by filling the large flags that draped the ceiling with the favors and at warning from the bugle the large flags were released scattering their contents over the interested spectators who were caught unawares. After the sounding of the mess call by the buglers the members of the Women's Ambulance Corps, who were in uniform, distributed among the audience 1,100 bags of pop corn.

The program was opened with singing of the Star Spangled Banner by the Company M double quartet and the entire audience standing, producing a decided military effect to the show from the beginning. It would be unfair to place individual praise upon any of the performers or acts as they were all in the Broadway class and far excelled even the expectations of those in charge of the program but it can be well said that each and every act was thoroughly enjoyed and will linger in memories for some time to come. The program was carried out in every detail with exception of two acts, Earl Hummel, the local violinist having contracted the "flu," making it impossible for him to appear, and Carby and Carby, on the bill as dancing artists, missed their train.

Something new was the performance of the trained seals under the direction of Captain Ray G. Hueling, a new resident of this city. Few people of Kingston realized that they had real trained seals living in their town until Captain Fowler explained that these seals were kept and trained near the Kingston bridge on Washington avenue. It was their first appearance in their home town and they surely gave the spectators some real stunts in balancing that is seldom accomplished by man.

Irving Spector, the celebrated Russian violinist, proved himself an artist on his instrument and was loudly applauded for encores. For the lovers of "Frisco" jazz, the Concertos proved themselves capable of supplying that latest thing in popular music.

The find of the season in the vocal musical world, Charles Martin, the singer from the west, as he is known, was without a doubt one of the finest tenor soloists ever heard in this city. It was necessary that he re-appear to satisfy the wants of his appreciative listeners. Mr. Martin is to sing in the concert in the Hippodrome in New York city Sunday night.

The program was brought to a hilarious climax when three colored couples from this city and Catskill clashed for the prize of a $10 gold piece for the best cake-walk produced. So close was the competition in this contest that it was necessary for them to repeat their performance that the judges might decide who was the superior.

Steve and Imogene Jones, Catskill, captured the prize upon their reappearance by performing gracefully one of the most difficult tricks of the fancy dancing art when Steve deliberately threw his partner, Miss Imogene, into the air and she turned a complete somersault before again returning to his arms for a fond embrace. The four judges of the cake-walk composed every party represented in politics but their decision pleased every one regardless of their favorite on election day. Captain Fowler picked as judges, the Hon. G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Philip Elting, Ex-County Judge James Jenkins and John Hiltebrant, all of whom were in attendance as spectators.

It would be well at this time to let the public know that it was through the untiring efforts and work of Captain Everett Fowler that this complete bill of headline acts were secured for Kingston's sons and their families. Never before could such a show be collected for this city and if you missed it you will never be able to see such a bill at one time at any cost or any place.

At 11 o'clock Muller's 17-piece orchestra, who furnished the music for the performance, continued to play for dancing and the guests topped off their evening of pleasure with a dance to the strains of this popular collection of musicians.

The program as rendered was as follows:

Spencer's Business School Notes.

Since last reported in daily papers, the following graduates of Spencer's Business school have obtained well paying positions in leading commercial offices in this vicinity:

Joseph Lynch, an experienced graduate of the combination course, has secured a permanent and satisfactory situation as bookkeeper and stenographer with the Salemen's Corporation, 111 Broadway, New York city.

Edward Fischang, who has had some experience in various offices in the city, has obtained a permanent situation as stenographer and office assistant with Spencer, Merritt & Lown, 288 Wall street, this city.

Miss Babetta Hadash, a graduate in stenography, has obtained an excellent and permanent position as stenographer and clerical assistant with a large concern in New York city.

Miss Anna Wynkoop, an experienced graduate of Spencer's Business School, has been placed in a permanent, well paying situation as bookkeeper and clerical assistant with Cornell & Decker, dealers in flour and feed, Stamford, N. Y.

Miss Lillie Lehner, an honor graduate of Spencer's Business School, has been placed through the free employment department in a desirable position as shorthand clerk and billing operator with William R. Harrison & Co., wholesale grocers, this city.

Miss Mildred Olsen, a very competent stenographer and typist, has been located as shorthand clerk and typist in a substitute position with Amos Van Etten, lawyer, Fair street, this city.

Miss Ida Lipkin, of the shorthand department of Spencer's School, has secured a situation as stenographer and office clerk with Gilbert Kennedy, 34 Ferry street, this city.

Nearly 250 pupils have enrolled in the different departments this school year. The teachers are making very substantial progress with their pupils, and it is expected that an unusually large and intelligent class of experts will be graduated within the next few months.

Held for the Grand Jury.

Steve Murphy, arrested at Lomontville, Monday after midnight by Deputy Sheriff Jocelyn, in the Hutchins farm house, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Sidney Myer of Marbletown Wednesday and held to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of burglary in the third degree. The confiscation of a jug of rum found on the premises caused Murphy's undoing.

CHRISTMAS IN FRANCE.

Diamond Writes of Festivities With French Village Children.

The following letter from Corporal Joseph L. Diamond, Co. L, 59th Pioneer Infantry, has been received by Mrs. E. H. Albrecht of No. 153 Hunter street, this city.

On Active Service With the American Expeditionary Forces
Boucq, Dec. 28th, 1918.

Dear Mother:—Just these few lines to let you know I am well and hope this finds you and the folks at home the same. I have received three letters from you since I wrote you last and also one from sister Lottie. The date of your last letters were November 28th and December 1st. The reason I have not written in so long a time is I have been traveling quite some in the last few weeks so did not get time to write.

Well, mother, dear, I received the Christmas box you sent me and every thing was in good condition. I am smoking one of those F. and D. cigars now, and they sure are great.

We are back to civilization once again, we are now in a little town of about five hundred population, and after being out in the wilderness of the Argonne Forest and shell holes it seems great to get back here. We certainly had some trip coming here, we were traveling on one of the many narrow gauge railroads through this country and passed through the Verdun and St. Mihel sectors. We arrived here afternoon of the 24th and got my Christmas box that evening.

The other three companies of the Third battalion had been in this town for a couple of weeks waiting for our company to join them, so they had a big Christmas tree at the town square. They also had an entertainment planned for Christmas morning and it was certainly fine. The colonel and major spoke of the great work the regiment did on the lines and the 59th band was here and played. They also had some good singing by the Third battalion chorus. The school children sang songs and all had a fine time. They had a fellow dressed as Santa Claus and he gave all the little kiddies candies, oranges, nuts and figs. He also gave each soldier a sock filled with goodies such as nuts, candy, oranges, figs, cigarettes and cigars. We then had a good dinner, consisting of turkey, mashed potatoes, bread, coffee, dates, grapes and pumpkin pie. So I'll say we fared pretty well for Christmas.

We got our new uniforms today every thing complete. So if rumors about town are true; I will be with you soon. I am writing this in a waiting room donated by the Salvation Army. They have a piano here and the boys are playing and singing now. This organization has certainly done great work for the dough boys at the front as well as behind the lines. We are living in vacated houses now and have a very nice place. Will close now for this time with love, kisses and best wishes.

Hoping to be with you soon.

Your loving son,
JOSEPH L. DIAMOND,
Co. L, 59th Pioneer Infantry.

The Old Order Changeth

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"You may be only a poor typist," smug little Aunt Caroline had told her niece Babette, "but don't forget that you are a lady—or are entitled to call yourself one so long as you don't do any things that are unworthy of a real lady."

Aunt Caroline had never done any of those things; in fact, she had worked at rather trying odds for the last ten years in the uptown flat where she kept house for her own four sons and daughters and her niece Babette.

And they had all remained ladies—she and her daughter and the niece, and the three boys had, so far as the mother knew, remained "perfect gentlemen"—in spite of the three flights up and the dingy, bare, painted walls of the kitchen where Caroline's work never seemed to be done, and in spite of the debts there had been to pay after the husband's long illness.

On the parlor table there was a copy of a well-known book on so-called social usage, and although the chapter on candle parties and the advice the writer of the book gave on "how to act when meeting the English royal family," and how to write to the archbishop of Canterbury had been of little real use to Caroline, she found much of it immensely helpful to her in her task.

The fact was that Caroline had, as she said, seen very much better days in the years when she and her cousin, Babette's mother—for Babette was not a real niece—had, for one brief season mingled in a society that never found its way to Caroline's poor little widow's flat.

Then came the marriages of Caroline and Babette's mother and the death of both Babette's parents, the death of Caroline's husband the bringing up of the five children in the ways of gentlefolk, and then, a year ago, Babette's engagement to Caroline's oldest son—who, to be sure, was only a sort of third cousin.

The courtship was conducted along lines that would have been approved by even the author of that book on social decorum on Caroline's parlor table. The young people, reminded that it was not well-bred to go to the theater unchaperoned, never went to the movies on a Saturday night without Caroline in tow, though poor Caroline sometimes endured all kinds of torment fearing that she was a hindrance to their good time. And Caroline remembered that when Babette's mother and she had been engaged they had not permitted their lovers more than the meagerest kisses, and those on the cheek.

Engagements are sometimes broken, they had been told, and a "real lady" would never cease regretting the fact if she had ever allowed any more passionate salute from a man who did not become her husband. So Caroline had told Babette and her son and, though they had been engaged a year, there was but one salute a day, and that very decorously upon the cheek.

When the first Christmas of their engagement came about Caroline had reminded her children that "well-bred engaged people did not give personal presents." The young man, besides the engagement ring, should give nothing but flowers, books and candy." Her own husband had given her a copy of Tennyson's poems on the Christmas they were engaged, and the Tennyson now reposed beneath the book on good form on the parlor table.

He had given her roses on all holidays and candies every weekend. There was no reason, Caroline said, why her son should not do so much for Babette. He could afford it, for he was now getting a generous salary.

Babette didn't often protest, but she was a practical bit of a girl, and when she might have been making a collection of useful household things given her by her husband-to-be—as other girls she knew did—she took small pleasure in the little bunch of roses that faded on her bureau after every holiday nor in the candles that she shared with her cousins every weekend.

From her own slender earnings she might have bought things that would eventually have helped feather the nest, too, but Caroline assured her that would not have been in good form. The great authority especially cautioned young women against giving anything of a personal nature to their fiances.

Books, desk accessories, accessories of sport—a riding crop, or something of that sort—were the things suggested. And as Caroline's eldest son, Stephen, had no desk save the office one he toiled at eight hours a day, and knew no sports save struggling with the crowds on his daily trip to and from that office, Babette's choice was limited to books.

He liked the Stevenson and the Kipling she had given him, but how much sooner they could have been married if instead of those books she could have given him something that would do for the little flat—chairs and tables, or a rug, perhaps!

It was three weeks before Christmas and Babette and Stephen had each secretly decided to linger after office hours to make the Christmas purchases. Unknown to each other they were both part of the great throng that swarmed one of the department stores not far from their own places of work. At the door of the store Babette had received a little holly-decked card, and on it were words something like this:

"The patriotic gift this year is the useful gift. We feel it our duty to urge our customers to refrain from buying nonessentials. So, instead of displaying a large stock of Christmas candies and our usual Christmas books and flowers, we are recommending gifts of useful household articles and articles of apparel."

What if Caroline could see it that way? mused Babette, and then, yielding to the temptation, she took the elevator to the floor where were sold the household articles, dishes and furniture and kitchen things. There she ran almost precipitately into Stephen. He, too, was holding one of the little holly-decked cards.

"I have been looking at a set of dishes," he said. "Maybe after we are married we can get one. He pressed Babette's hand—perhaps that wasn't exactly good form, but the crowd was pushing close beside them and no one could have seen. "It's pretty hard to wait," he said. "Babette, if we had the things to start housekeeping on, perhaps we wouldn't have to wait so long. Perhaps in February—I heard today I'm to get a good raise at New Year's."

"If, instead of getting each other a set of Scott or Dickens we could get that set of dishes and some things to cook with—" faltered Babette.

"I could give mother $10 every week, and still have enough to run our little flat on," whispered Stephen, "and Roger will be bringing in more after New Year's."

There was little further explanation. It seemed as if they were compelled by a force greater than the will power of either, greater than the silent influence of Caroline or the binding force of that book on the parlor table. Yes, they did go and they ordered that set of dishes—that with the money Stephen had expected to spend on the leather-bound Scott with Babette's money saved for the edition de luxe of Dickens they went and, after a half hour with a patient saleswoman, bought everything that any clever bride ever needed to make a little flat kitchen complete.

Then they turned their steps homeward toward Caroline.

"Perhaps we can arrange it in January—would you, Babette? I've got enough saved for the bedroom set, and with the dishes and the kitchen things I've enough for the other things. Do you suppose your mother—"

There was a pause, for traffic made it hard to understand; then a bill: "There's something in that Tennyson on the parlor table that goes like this:

"'The old order changeth, yielding place to new,
And God fulfills himself in many ways.'

"Perhaps mother will see it that way, and I brought this little card home. Mother is very patriotic."

And, strangely enough, Caroline made no protest, so busy was she at once in reading what the book on good form had to say on "wedding etiquette."

NOT HARD TO RECOGNIZE HIM

Almost at a Glance Papa Could Tell Which of the Swans Was the Father.

Congressman Seaborn Reddenburg of Georgia gently smiled when the talk here dwelt on the lord and master of the domestic ranch. He said he was reminded of little John's visit to the zoo.

While rambling around among the animals with his father one afternoon, so ran the story of the congressman, little Johnny came to a miniature lake on which two swans were swimming.

"Papa," said Johnny, pointing a chubby little finger out over the lake, "is that the father swan or the mother swan?"

"Which one do you mean, Johnny?" asked the old man, glancing in the direction indicated by the boy.

"I mean the one over there," answered Johnny. "The one with all the feathers picked off his head and isn't allowed to have the biscuit or nothing."

"Yes, my son," promptly replied papa, with just a suspicion of a sigh, "that's the father swan, all right."

An Ancient Custom.

Mr. Inglefield, the principal doorkeeper at the British house of commons, is dead. His was quite a responsible post, for the holder must have an astounding memory for faces. The house of commons is probably the last place where snuff is regularly taken. The attendants take it because they have long hours of duty in which smoking is barred, and a good many members apparently follow the ancient habit. Mr. Inglefield, the Liverpool Post says, always kept a box on his seat at the door, and it was surprising to see how numerous were the members who helped themselves to a pinch as they went in or out of the house.

Historic Memorials.

In course of time the historic associations of the battlefields of Manchuria will be preserved by numerous monuments that are being erected by the Society for the Preservation of the Memory of Manchurian Battlefields. Up to date 22 memorials have been erected, among the latest being one marking the spot where Generals Nogi and Stoessel met on the eve of the surrender of Port Arthur.

Women in Parliament.

Women are now entitled to sit in the British parliament.

Prince of Writers of War.

In Valenciennes there is a statue of Jean Froissart, prince of war correspondents, who was a native of the town. Froissart came into all the splendor of the medieval life of Valenciennes, the streets crowded with knights and soldiers, priests, artisans and merchants, and the churches and houses rich with stained glass and precious carvings. There were also festivals, masques, tournaments and crusades every year. Instigated by his seigneur, he set himself to write contemporary history. He could describe a battle more vividly than any of his contemporaries. He wanted to know everything; liked to get the story of a battle from both sides and many points of view, and wanted the details of every little cavalry skirmish, every capture of a castle, every gallant action and brave deed. A good journalist, he forgot nothing. "I had," he says, "thanks to God, sense, memory, good remembrance of everything, and an intellect clear and keen to seize upon the facts which I could learn."

Truth About the Desert.

The French, who have been the greatest explorers of the desert, have corrected many false ideas about the desert. The most conspicuous and persistent of these errors has been the notion that the desert is a vast area of sand. The French have proved that this is not so. In fact, only about a fifth of the Sahara is covered with sand.

The greatest desert in the world is about as large as the United States and Alaska together. The sand areas in the desert are somewhat larger than Alaska; and the rocky tablelands forming most of the desert are somewhat smaller than the United States. In other words, the Sahara is made up of about 700,000 square miles of sand and 2,000,000 square miles of rock surface.

Work of Bureau of Standards.

One of the many new undertakings of the bureau of standards is an investigation of magnetic compasses, in behalf of the naval observatory, the joint army and navy board of specifications, and the shipping board. The bureau proposes to develop a standard method of testing compasses and to prepare specifications for the purchase of compasses by the government. A special form of magnetometer has been devised for the determination of magnetic moment and a rotation test for pivot friction is being developed. The bureau expects to test several thousand compasses in the course of the present year.

Example for Seats.

Unto the seat that will I go
Each evening one shirt
For there he'll seat to raise the dough.
The seat on which he sits.

WHY

Modern Environment Was Fatal to Eskimo

Mene, the Eskimo boy whom Admiral Peary brought back from the arctic zone years ago, is dead of pneumonia in a logging camp. It was scarcely a kindness, though meant as one, for Peary to take him away from his native snow and ice. A man of the old stone age could not survive in the modern environment of civilization; or perhaps in the view of the Cro-Magnons, who drew pictures in colors on the walls of French and Spanish caves 20,000 years ago, drawings that still survive, civilization does not amount to much when dangers from street cars, automobiles, falling airplanes, influenza and a multitude of other things are greater than were those from the saber-toothed tiger or the woolly rhinoceros in their day.

No Eskimo has ever flourished in the temperate zone. The scenery of Greenland and Baffin Land may be monotonous, it may have a certain uniform whiteness that tires the eye, but fresh air is abundant and nipping. It is not poisoned by soft-coal smoke, and it suits the native's lungs.

TO ENGLISHMAN THE HONOR

How Ice Cream, Perhaps Most Popular of Delicacies, Was Given to Appreciative World.

Many persons think that Dolly Madison made the first ice cream, but Thyra Samter Winslow, an English woman, who has made a long and careful study of the subject declares that Dolly Madison was merely the first person in America to serve it. This was at a White House reception during the administration of President Madison. The guests liked the cream so well that they asked how it was made, and from that start beginning a vast business has grown up. According to a creamery expert, the American people eat more than 250,000,000 gallons of ice cream in a year. The first ice cream was made by a London confectioner named Gunton, and others learned to make it. Gunton's methods of freezing were crude and uncertain. It remained for Nancy Johnson, wife of an American naval officer, to invent the ice cream freezer.

You've Heard of 'Em.

"Leddy," said Mournful Marmaduke, the meandering mendicant, "could yer help a poor feller what's the victim of circumstances?"

"What circumstances?" asked the suspicious woman with the pointed nose and drooped chin, as she glanced significantly toward the wood pile.

"Reduced circumstances, leddy."

British Columbia Shipbuilding.

The steel steamer War Dog, the first ship of its type to be built in British Columbia, was recently launched at Vancouver. The War Dog, with a length of 315 feet, is also the first steel cargo vessel to be built in that province. The contract was placed by a Japanese steamship company through an English firm. Since the steamer was launched she has been sold to a British firm.

Attractions of Treves.

It is as an ecclesiastical city that Treves is particularly interesting. In that famous cathedral are the remains of 25 archbishops and electors and four bishops. Among its treasures is a legendary nail from the Cross, and the famous Holy Coat, given the cathedral by St. Helena. In 1891 an exhibition of the Coat attracted more than 2,000,000 pilgrims. Another attraction for pilgrims is the grave of St. Matthias in one of the ancient churches—the only grave of an apostle in Germany.

IRISH SITUATION VERY CRITICAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Dublin, Jan. 23.—"If the Sinn Fein parliament's proceedings are serious we are on the eve of one of the most tragic chapters in the history of Ireland," said the Freeman Journal today in commenting on the situation which is developing here.

The Irish press is full of such forebodings

The Freeman's Journal continued: "If the parliament is not serious the Irish people will cut a ridiculous figure in the eyes of the world.

"Professor De Valera is now being boomed by his followers as 'the first president of the Irish republic'."

E. De Valera is the president of the Sinn Fein organization and is now in jail on a political charge. He took part in the Dublin rebellion and was originally sentenced to death but the sentence was commuted. He was elected to parliament in 1917 but refused to take his seat and was re-elected in the December election, last.

The Irish Times, in commenting upon the situation, said:

"It (the Sinn Fein parliament) has aroused hopes which it cannot fulfill."

This newspaper warns strongly against Irish Bolshevism.

The Irish Independent says that it would be to Ireland's advantage to be associated with Great Britain with a dominion government, but that the prospects of the republicans are remote

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 23.—Only a few stocks were active at the opening of the stock market today. Professionals were buyers at the opening, causing fractional gains, but before the end of the first fifteen minutes these gains were turned into losses. Mexican Petroleum rose 1½ to 165¾ and then dropped to 163. United States Steel made an opening gain of ¼ at 90⅝ and then sold off to 90¼. Bethlehem Steel B dropped ½ to 58¼ and Southern Pacific yielded ⅝ to 96⅝. Inspiration gained ⅛ to 44. Marine Preferred was again under pressure, declining ⅞ to 98¾.

In the first hour some large selling orders appeared in Steel Common on which the price dropped one point to 89¾. The buying was scattered but increased at the low level and caused a quick rally to 90. Marine Preferred, after selling down to 98¼, rallied 2 points. Changes in the other active issues were generally in fractions and to higher figures.

The market closed strong today; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds weak.

SAWKILL.

Sawkill, Jan. 23.—St. Ann's Church, Sunday, January 26—Mass and sermon at 8:30 a. m. Sunday school at 2 p. m. Devotions at 3:30 p. m.

St. Wendelin's Church, Ruby.—Mass and sermon at 10:30 a. m. Sunday school after. The Rev. Geo. J. Vaeth, rector.

The funeral of Thomas McGuire of New York, formerly of Sawkill, was largely attended by many sorrowing friends. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The Rev. George J. Vaeth said the Mass and gave the final committal prayers in St. Ann's cemetery. James Murphy was the funeral director.

A Holy Mass will be offered on Wednesday, January 29, for the deceased Sergeant Bernard Leahy, formerly of Sawkill, who sacrificed his life in France for Uncle Sam.

A Requiem Mass will be offered on Thursday, January 30, for the deceased Joseph Neenan as a compliment from the Rev. George J. Vaeth.

Messrs. John Starr and James Patrick of New York were visitors at the rectory.

Miss Jennie Carroll, who is under instructions of taking organ lessons from Prof. John Schwalbach, has shown her marked ability last Sunday at both services.

PINE GROVE

Pine Grove, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Leonard Snyder and daughter, Catherine, have been spending a week with relatives at Kingston.

Mrs. Edward Bishop and Mrs. Henry Burton and daughter spent Thursday of last week with Mrs. George Burton at West Saugerties.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burton attended the funeral of his nephew, Harry Brink, at Woodstock on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Burton and daughter spent Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. George Burton's.

Marguerite Bishop attended regents examinations at Saugerties high school on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Jack of All Trades.

Edinburgh once enjoyed the distinction of possessing the most prolific signboard on record: "John Main, Stationer, Bibles, Testaments, Psalms, Hymns, Prayer Books, Catechisms, Proverbs, Books, new and old, in various branches of literature. Money or exchange for old Books; Papers, Pens, and Ink; Wax and Wafers; Blackheads, Hair and Hair Pencils; Coloured Books, Memorandum Books, Religious Tracts, Books neatly bound, on moderate terms."

Magic Guard Against Rattlesnakes.

Camping out in a rattlesnake-infested district with no other protection for one's bed than an encircling horsehair rope would not give the average tenderfoot a feeling of security. A [illegible] in Popular Mechanics Magazine, showed two campers making their bed on the Western plains, surrounded by nothing more stable than one of these ropes, as it is well known in that region that rattlesnakes have an unconquerable aversion for crawling over a rope of this kind.

THE TEASE.

"A little girl named Grace," said Daddy, "had a doll. She was devoted to this doll as you can imagine she might be."

Nancy smiled and said: "I know how fond she must have been of her doll, Daddy."

And Nick said: "I know, too. Nancy loves her dolls so much and especially one doll she has."

"Yes," said Daddy, "and although Nick doesn't care about playing with dolls, he is never unkind to Nancy's dolls. He does not toss them about and play mean tricks with them. He's not a bully, I'm glad to say."

Nick grinned a little foolishly at these remarks of Daddy's, but he was very much pleased, for it was a good deal to have his great big, strong Daddy tell him such fine things.

"You're right, Daddy," said Nancy. "I know lots of girls, and their brothers are horrid to their dolls and laugh at them for caring about them. Nick never does that."

"Let's hear the story," said Nick modestly.

"Grace had named her doll Gracie and she used to love to play with Gracie, as I have said before. Gracie was a rag doll, so she was pretty easy to do anything to.

"Grace had a brother named Edward, and Edward was a tease, not a nice, good-natured, funny sort of a tease, but he was the kind who hurt people's feelings. He would see some one who had a suit on which was not new, or which had been patched, and he would try to make the one who was wearing it feel very uncomfortable.

"Edward would also see boys wearing their older brothers' suits, and he would say with a mean look: 'Where did you get that suit?'

"And—he also liked to tease Grace by making fun of Gracie and by tossing her up in the air, and playing with her as though she were a ball, and he could bat her in a game of his own mean making.

"Oh, how she would feel when Gracie was lifted up into Edward's hands, and then he would toss her up and say:

"'What's the difference? She's only made of rag. Why do you care? Gracie doesn't.'

"That would hurt Grace's feelings so, as you can well imagine."

"He was horrid," said Nancy.

"Trying to hurt something which couldn't hurt him," said Nick, in a very disgusted tone of voice.

"Yes," said Daddy. "He caused Grace a good deal of unhappiness, and Grace was always afraid that Gracie would fall to pieces. One day he left her high up in a tree out in the yard, and Grace was afraid that more snow would come in the night and that it would spoil her beloved Gracie.

"But a boy, a friend of Edward's, who didn't think Edward was really much of a boy for teasing Grace in that horrid way, and had finally come to hardly playing at all with Edward, found Grace crying. He found out what the trouble was, and he got Gracie from the high limb of the tree.

"Edward didn't know that his friend had brought down the doll, and at night when he slept, lo and behold, Gracie seemed to come and stand at the end of his bed.

"But no longer was Gracie a little rag doll. She had grown, oh, she had grown. And she was wearing instead of a painted wig, great icicles which were so heavy and cold looking.

"Her body seemed very stiff and straight. It seemed very strong, and as though she were made of steel or of iron instead of rags.

"'Edward,' she said, and her voice seemed harsh and terrible, 'Edward,' she continued, 'you left me out in the snow tonight, so as to tease your little sister. But now I will show you what it is like to be abused. Even if you don't actually hurt me, you hurt your sister who loves me. Wait and I will show you.'

"'Oh, don't,' shrieked Edward. He was very cowardly when he was going to be teased, you see. 'I'll be good, I promise,' and his voice sounded thoroughly frightened.

"'I'll have to show you first,' said the doll. She took Edward in her arms, which had grown so big and so hard, and she tossed him up in the air and around and about, so that he was frightened any moment he might land on the ground.

"And Edward thought of the doll outside as he thought she still was there, and oh, he was so sorry, but he never again made Grace miserable by teasing Gracie."

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, Jan. 23.—"President's Day" of the Woman's Club was celebrated on Monday afternoon, Jan. 20, at a luncheon held at Hunt Memorial Hall at 1:30 o'clock. Covers were laid for thirty, which included the members and several guests being limited to a guest in the home of members at the time of the luncheon. The committee in charge of this very delightful mid-winter affair were Mrs. L. E. Vernon, Mrs John McDowell and Mrs John W. Ewing, and was pronounced by all attending to have been a very enjoyable success. The important feature of this social gathering was the fine address delivered by Miss Rose of New York city and the subject was "Civics." At the appointed time the president of the club, Mrs. Helen B. Holman, gave a splendid opening address and then introduced the speaker of the hour, who immediately responded. Miss Rose proved to be master of the subject presented and along lines of civic welfare she was warm to her subject and delighted all to the earnest and sincere profit that was intended for future life. The club were indeed fortunate in securing this speaker, who is attracting much attention at this time everywhere along the many lines of civic work upon which she is engaged.

"Over There and Here" is the subject of the guest meeting of the Ellenville Musical Club to be held at Memorial Hall on the evening of January 30. Mrs. George H. Smith, Miss Barbara Deyo and Mrs. George Taylor in charge. The program for this meeting is one arranged by Miss Nell K. McElhone in France, charter member of the club. During the world peace conference seems a most fitting time to become familiar with the music of our Allies. The songs of Paris today and the translation of French poetry sent to the club in such a delightful personal way by Miss McElhone herself. There is so much merit to be derived from "Over There" that this meeting will take the place of the regular meeting of the club announced for February 6, and the program entitled "Great Singers, Past and Present," will be given at a later date.

Miss Elizabeth Baxter of Kingston spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Baxter, on Liberty street.

Stanley I. Booth of Hartford, Conn., has been spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Booth, Jr., on Park street.

Louis Goldberg, who formerly ran the surprise store on Canal street, has leased the Mike Eidel boarding house at Woodbourne.

Miss Evelyn R. Bailey is in New York for some weeks and during her absence Mrs. Bailey is stopping with Mrs. C. F. Taylor and family on Center street.

Mrs William H. Carman returned with her daughter, Mrs John Vinden, to Cromch, Conn., where she will make her home.

The following directors have been elected at the First National Bank: Dwight Divine, George Deyo, C. D. Divine, C. H. Sheeley, R. Eugene Clark, Lewis DuBois, Arthur V. Hornbeck, Henry F. Hornbeck, M. Eugene Clark. President Clark was reelected; vice president, George Deyo; cashier, Frank R. Hornbeck; assistant, Miss Anna R. Hornbeck.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, Jan. 23.—On Sunday next, January 26, the Rev. J. J. Lewis, pastor of the Esopus Methodist Church, will take for his morning theme, "The One Thing Needful." Service begins at 10:45. In the evening at 7:30 he will speak on "The Stewardship of Life." Members of the church and congregation are urged to attend both services. All seats free.

At the close of the service last Sunday evening the following trustees were elected to administer the "temporal" affairs of the Methodist Church. J. L. Schultz, for a term of three years; A. Terpening and R. M. Roberts for one year; S. E. Mott and J. P. Ganoung, for two years.

Miss Bessie House of Union Center is caring for her sister, Mrs. Leslie E. Mott, during her illness. We are glad to state that Mrs. Mott is recovering quite rapidly.

Gladys and Harold Lyons, Helen and Leslie Lund, Thelma Drake, Kenneth Best and Quentin Hummel went to Port Ewen on Tuesday and Wednesday to take the regents examinations. We wish them success in every subject taken.

The Rev. J. J. Lyons was called to Ulster Park on Wednesday afternoon of this week to officiate at the funeral service of Virginia G., the little daughter of Russell G. and Nora P. Olin.

Friends of Mrs. William H. Austin of Kenoza Lake will be glad to know that she is recovering from her severe illness of influenza. Much sympathy is expressed for Mr. Austin and family as this is the second time they have been visited by this serious epidemic.

ATWOOD.

Atwood, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Simon DuBois is spending a few days in Kingston with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jansen.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Krom and two daughters, Alice and Ellanora, and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Winchell and Mrs. Clarence Krom of Lomontville spent one day the past week with Mrs. Celia Osterhoudt of this place.

Mrs. Lawrence Markle and Mrs. Simon DuBois took a pleasure trip to Stone Ridge one day the past week.

Mrs. Lydia Wells, who has a resident of this place, died Thursday, January 16, 1919, aged 84 years, leaving one son, Peter W. Wells, to mourn her loss. Her funeral was held at the Atwood M. E. Church Sunday past at 1 o'clock and was attended by many of her friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Markle and Mrs. Celia Osterhoudt and son, Charles, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Krom and son, Clarence and two daughters, Alice and Ellanora, all of this place, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Winchell at Lomontville Wednesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben E Burger and family entertained on Thursday evening of this week for dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hornbeck, Mrs. F Zeaman and Mr and Mrs. Deroy Baker and son, Kenneth.

The ladies of our neighborhood are very much engrossed these January days in making quilts. "Quilting parties" are quite the order of the day in our small town and a very neighborly sociable time is had over the quilting frames. Usually a delicious dinner is served by the hostess at whatever home they may be, and no real selections enjoyed if a musical instrument is available. Not until the sun has nearly set do the ladies take their way homeward, with a good lot of work accomplished. For good, old-fashioned neighborliness and kindness, give us "Ye old time quilting bees."

Charles B. Osterhoudt was a Kingston visitor one day last week.

Earl Miller has accepted a position at Lake Mohonk for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Burger will entertain for "an all day visiting" on Saturday the following. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kelder and sons, Robbie and Franklyn, Mr and Mrs. William Baker and son, Benson, Mr. and Mrs Charles D. Osterhoudt and son, Jansen, and Mr. and Mrs. John Enderly of Whitfield.

The school children are enjoying three days' vacation this week All should attend on Thursday and Friday as the grade examinations will be given them. The teacher, Miss Dick spent the vacation at her Kingston home.

Tracy Baker, Oscar Mackey and Virgil Wood were among those who attended the party at Whitfield on Monday evening.

John Vandemark butchered several pigs the past week, and delivered them to Ellenville parties. Jacob Kelder and C. D. Osterhoudt assisted in the butchering.

Jesse Osterhoudt and men and teams are doing a large straw business this week.

Roswell Osterhoudt lost his old gray "Kit" horse the past week. This has been a faithful horse and must have been more than 20 years old.

BLEACHED OATS ARE POOR SEED

Sulphur Process Brightens Grains, but It Reduces Germinating Qualities.

PAY ATTENTION TO QUALITY

Same Amount of Time, Labor and Money Required to Sow Field, Whether Viability High or Low —Buy Under Contract.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the purchase and selection of oats for seed farmers are warned to be careful of grain that has been bleached by the sulphur process. This process is now used extensively by commercial grain dealers to give oats of inferior quality a bright, clean appearance. In experiments, conducted by the specialists of the United States department of agriculture, it was found that in nearly every sample of sulphur bleached oats there was a great reduction in the germinating power. The largest reduction was in a sample which germinated 97.5 per cent before treating and 9.5 per cent after treating, or a total reduction in germination of 88 per cent caused by sulphuring.

Too much attention cannot be paid to the quality of seed for the same amount of time, labor and money is required to sow a field of oats, whether the viability of the seed be high or low, and the product will be influenced directly by the percentage of germination of the seed. A casual observer is probably more likely to be misled as to the true quality of oats than of any other grain for seeding purposes, because oats that have been sulphured present an attractive appearance; therefore special care must be taken to ascertain whether this appearance is due to bleaching by sulphur or whether it is natural.

Feed Oats Not Good for Seed.

It is not an uncommon practice throughout the smaller oat-growing areas for farmers to use for seed, oats that have been purchased for feeding purposes, especially when these oats appear to be of good quality. Frequently very poor yields are obtained from feed oats, because these oats may have been sulphur bleached.

Seedmen generally buy their oats under contracts, stipulating that such oats shall germinate not less than a specific percentage, and further that they shall not be sulphur bleached. This provision, of course, safeguards the farmer when he buys oats from a seedsman who states that such oats are suitable for seed. However, as there is no general regulation governing oats handling in intrastate transactions which requires that sulphured oats are to be labeled as such, the farmer generally is without protection and often sows oats that have been sulphured.

Process of Bleaching.

Two processes are in use in bleaching oats; known as the cold process and the warm process, the only difference being that in one case steam is used to moisten the grain and in the other cold water is used. As the moistened oats fall from the top of a tower they pass through sulphur fumes which come in contact with every kernel. After the oats have passed through the bleaching tower they are usually run in a bin and allowed to stand over night when they are cooled or dried as necessity may require.

SIRUP WILL REPLACE SUGAR

Novel Scheme Being Carried Out in Nebraska Community—Demand Bigger Than Supply.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A scheme to utilize a part of the sorghum crop for making a sugar substitute for human food is being carried out in Douglas county, Nebraska. In one community, through the efforts of the local county agent, six farmers cooperated in purchasing a small sorghum mill and secured the services of an experienced sorghum sirup maker. Although the sirup made at this mill is being sold at $1.25 to $1.50 a gallon, present indications are that the demand cannot be met. Five sorghum mills are now in operation in the county.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, Jan. 22.—Miss Lucetta Fraleigh was summoned to her home in Red Hook on Saturday by her father George Fraleigh, having had the misfortune to cut off one finger and part of the thumb, while using a buzz saw. His acquaintances in this vicinity are very sorry to hear of the accident.

Mrs. Andrew Evert and Mrs. Jacob Best went to Ulster Park on Friday afternoon to help prepare for the supper held in the hall at that place Friday evening by the Order of Odd Fellows. The ladies returned to Esopus on the evening train.

Miss Helen Green of Kingston was a week end guest of Miss Marian Mott.

Friends of Mrs. Leslie E. Mott will be sorry to learn that she is ill with influenza at her home in this village. All hope for her speedy recovery.

Miss Helen Cole and Miss Ruth Anderson of Poughkeepsie, enjoyed a week end visit at Larchmont Gardens with Miss Cole's grandmother, Mrs. J. Lund.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Methodist Church will be held on Friday afternoon of this week at 2:30 in the parsonage. Dr. F. H. Deming, district superintendent, will be present and all members are earnestly requested to be present as this will be the last conference for this year.

Mrs. Elmer Lund received another letter from her sister, Miss Isabelle Davis, Red Cross nurse now in Bordeaux, in a hospital trying to help the soldiers in their efforts to regain their health sufficiently to return to the United States.

A very pleasing social event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Beaver on Thursday evening of last week, January 16. Thirty years ago on the above named date Mr. Beaver and Miss Martha Lowe were united in marriage at the home of the bride's brother, by the Rev. M. Van Doren, who was then pastor of the Ulster Park Reformed Church. Without informing them of the fact that this would be the anniversary of their wedding day, Mr. and Mrs. Beaver invited a number of their "long time friends" to spend the evening at their home. All responded with pleasure to the invitation and accordingly assembled at the hour mentioned, 8:30. The guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ouglehtree of Kingston, Mrs. Schuyler Ouglehtree and Mrs. Etta Lowe of Port Ewen, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cole of Ulster Park, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Terpening of Union Center, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Beaver, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Mott, Mr. and Mrs. William J. McLain, the Rev. J. J. Lyons and family, Mrs. M. Roberts and Mr. and Mrs. John Olsen of Esopus. At about 7:30 Lawyer Ouglehtree, in a few well chosen words, informed the guests that they were there to celebrate the thirtieth wedding anniversary of their host and hostess. After congratulations, all entered the spacious dining room where a bountiful collation was served. The center of the long dining table was adorned with a large vase of carnations; also there was a carnation and spray of green at each plate. The dates 1889 and 1919 prettily made of dated pink paper on cardboard ground, by Mrs. Olsen, were placed on either side of centerpiece. After partaking of the many good things provided, the guests were given a great treat by Mr. Ouglehtree, who read an original poem, the subject being "The Bride and Groom," whose anniversary was being observed. Later in the evening Mrs. Olsen rendered some fine violin selections and the entire company sang patriotic and other songs, with piano accompaniment. John H. Beaver also gave a vocal solo. Guests present on Thursday evening, who attended the wedding thirty years ago, were Mrs. Etta Lowe, Mrs. Schuyler Ouglehtree, Mrs. Clarence Cole, Miss Cynthia Lowe and Mrs. Frank Terpening. At a very late hour the guests reluctantly said good night after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Beaver many more years of happiness and prosperity.

TARASCO HEIGHTS.

The remains of Mrs. Norman Barley, who lived with her son in Fleischmanns, were brought to this place for burial in the Sunnyside Cemetery on Thursday last. Mrs Barley was formerly of Lashbard and was well known here. We extend sympathy to the family.

Lucelia Decker visited at Asa Wynkoop's on Sunday.

Harry Brookfield, the well known wood manufacturer of New York city, is spending a few days at the Rocker homestead. Mr Brookfield is making some improvements on the farm he purchased of Mrs Minnie Rocker in Lower Montgomery.

Examinations will be held in the school on Thursday and Friday.

Willie Hankes sawed wood for Charles Rose on Monday with his gasoline engine.

GREW FROM ROMAN COLONY

City and Fortress of Cologne Has Figured Prominently in the Pages of History.

A fortress of the first rank, and a place of trade and manufacture, Cologne is one of the most important cities in Germany. It lies in a vast semicircle on the left bank of the Rhine, some 45 miles north-northwest of Coblenz, and, as the center of a network of railways, it has direct communication with all the chief cities of Europe; whilst along the broad waters of the Rhine its ships may go down to the sea. At the time when Julius Caesar was leading his legions over Gaul, in the first century before the Christian era, Cologne was the chief town of the Ubii, and was known to the Romans as the Oppidum Ubiorum. Here, in A. D. 50, a Roman colony was planted by the Emperor Claudius, in honor of his wife, Agrippina, and given the name of Colonia Agrippina. It rapidly rose to be a place of importance, and, under the emperors, had the privilege of the Jus Italicum. Then came the decline of the empire, and with it the outlying Roman city began to feel more and more the pressure of the Frankish hosts, as they moved steadily westward. The city was taken by the Franks in 330, but they did not permanently occupy it until the fifth century, when, in 475, it became the residence of the Frankish king, Childeric.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT

George Really Couldn't Get Interested Over Probable Loss of Another Person's Boat.

They were tossing about on the wild and restless firth in a small open boat, at least a hundred feet from the beach. He was struggling manfully to battle with the surging waves and to pull for the shore; she was sitting in a heap in the stern of the frail bark, holding on like grim death and mentally vowing that she would never again be tempted by her sweetheart's daring spirit to venture so far from land.

"I know we shall go over," she shrieked, as the boat gave another lurch. "Oh, George, try and manage it!"

"I will," replied he firmly. "I could get along splendidly if the waves didn't make it go all ways at once. Don't be afraid, Sarah. We're getting nearer, aren't we?"

"A little. Oh, George, what shall we do if the boat is lost?"

"Don't worry yourself about that, my dear," said George smilingly. "You mustn't upset yourself about other people's business. It isn't our boat."
